Theſe were of old one of the two eſtates of France, to whom was committed the care of providing ſacrifices, of preſcribing laws for their worſhip, of the deciding the controverſies amongſt the people, concerning the bounds of their grounds, and ſuch like.

They had alſo the tutoring of young children, who commonly remained under their tuition for 20 years. They taught them many verſes which they cauſed them to learn by heart, without the aſſiſtance of any writing; and thoſe who had not been inſtructed by theſe Druids, were not eſteem'd ſufficiently qualify'd to manage the affairs of ſtate. At the end of the year, their cuſtom was to go with great reverence, and gather branches and leaves of oak and miſletoe, to make a preſent to Jupiter, inviting all people to this ceremony by theſe words, which they cauſed to be proclaimed, Come to the oak branches the new year.

They had oaks in great eſtimation, and all that grew on them, eſpecially Miſletoe, which they worſhipped as a thing ſent unto them from heaven. The manner of their ſacrifices is related as follows. They cauſed meat to be prepared under an oak where Miſletoe grew, and two white bulls to be brought out, having their horns bound, i. e. firſt ſet to the plough; then the prieſt arrayed in white, climbed up a tree, and having a bill of gold in his hand, threſhed off the Miſletoe; then offered the ſacrifice, praying that the gift might be proſperous to the receivers; ſuppoſing the beaſt that was barren, if it drank of the Miſletoe, would be very fruitful, and that it was a remedy againſt all poiſon.

In their general aſſemblies they are ſaid to have practiſed that which Pliny relates of the ſtorks, which uſually tear in pieces the laſt that comes to their meeting, to oblige the reſt to be more diligent. They are reported to have been very cruel, and ordinarily murdered men upon the altars of their gods; and also in their schools, for it is related of one of their doctors named Herophilus, that he taught anatomy over the bodies of living men at times, to the number of 700.

To EARN [ȝeaꝛnian, Sax.] to get or obtain by labour, as hire.

EA'RNEST, money advanc'd to compleat or aſſure a verbal bargain, and bind the parties to the performance thereof.

EARNEST [ȝeoꝛneꝛꝛt, Sax.] eager, vehement, induſtrious, diligent; alſo important, weighty.

EA'RNESTNESS [ȝeoꝛneꝛꝛtneꝛꝛe, Sax.] vehement or ſtrong deſire or endeavour.

EA'RNING, rennet to turn milk into cheeſe-curds.

EARST, formerly, Milton.

EARTH [ȝeoꝛð, Sax. Terre, Fr. Terra, Lat. Γῆ, Gr. ארץ, Heb.] the opinion of the ancients concerning the figure of the earth, was very different from what is now believed; ſome held it to be a large hollow veſſel; others that it was an immenſe plain, ſupported with pillars like a table. And theſe opinions were ſo ſtiffly maintain'd by ſome of the fathers (particularly Lactantius and Auguſtin) and ſo firmly believed, even for more than 600 years after Chriſt, that pope Gregory excommunicated and depoſed Vigilius, biſhop of Strasburg, for aſſerting the Antipodes. And many of the philoſophers believ'd it to be a cone or high mountain, by which they accounted for the diſappearance of the ſun at night. But the moderns have diſcovered the body of the earth and water to be a globe, which may be prov'd by theſe plain and undeniable arguments.

1. It plainly appears that the earth is globular from the eclipſes of the moon; for the ſhadow of the earth being always round, the earth that is the body that intercepts the beams of the ſun, and is the undiſputed cauſe of ſuch eclipſe, muſt of neceſſity be of a round form.

2. The nearer any perſon approaches to either of the poles, the ſtars neareſt to the pole are the more elevated from the horizon towards the zenith; and on the contrary, the farther a perſon moves from the poles, the ſame ſtars ſeem to withdraw from him till they quite diſappear. Again, they riſe and ſet ſooner to one that travels to the Eaſt, than they do to one that travels to the Weſt; inſomuch that if a perſon ſhould ſpend a whole year in going round the earth to the Eaſt, he would gain a day; whereas on the contrary in journeying the ſame weſtward, he would loſe a day. And this is actually ſeen between the Portugueſe in Macao an iſland of the ſouth of China, and the Spaniards in the Philippine iſlands; the ſunday of the Portugueſe being the ſaturday of the Spaniards; occaſioned by the one's ſailing thither eaſtward, and the other weſtward; for the Portugueſe ſailing from Europe to the Eaſt-Indies, and thence to Macao; and the Spaniards paſſing weſtward from Europe to America, and thence to the Philippine iſlands, between them both, they have travelled round the earth.

3. That the world is round, is demonſtrated by the voyages that have been made quite round it; for if a ſhip ſetting out from England and ſailing continually weſtward, ſhall at laſt come to the Eaſt-Indies, and ſo home to England again, it is a plain demonſtration it is a globe and not a flat, a cube, a cone, or ony other form. And theſe navigations have of late years been frequently made, which puts the matter out of all doubt.

EARTH [with Chymiſts] is the laſt of the five chymical principles, or that part of bodies that moſt anſwers to what they call Caput mort or mortuum that remains behind in the furnace, and is neither capable of being raiſed by diſtillation, nor diſſolved by ſolution.

New EARTH [with Gardeners] that which never ſerved to the nouriſhment of any plant lying three foot deep, or as far as there is any real earth; or elſe earth which has been of a long time built upon, tho' it had borne before; or earth of a ſandy, loamy nature, where cattle have been fed for a long time.

Fallow EARTH [of eoꝛð and ƒealꝺ, Sax. a field] earth left unplough'd to recover and gain heart.

To EARTH [ȝeoꝛðiȝan, Sax.] to go into a hole as a badger or fox doth.

EARTH-Nut [eoꝛð-hnuƀ, Sax.] a certain root both in ſhape and taſte like a nut.

EA'RTHEN [of ȝeoꝛðen, Sax.] made of earth.

EA'RTHLINESS [of ȝeoꝛðȝelicneꝛꝛe, Sax.] earthly quality.

EARTHLY minded [of ȝeoꝛð and ȝemynde, Sax.] the mind, minding earthly things.

EA'RTHING [with Gardeners] is the covering the roots of trees, plants, &c. with earth.

EARTHING [with Hunters] is the lodging of a badger.

EA'RTHQUAKE [of ȝeoꝛð earth, and cƿacian, Sax. to quake] a violent ſhock or concuſſion of the earth, or ſome parts of it, cauſed by fire or hot vapours pent up in the bowels or hollow parts of it, which force a paſſage, and frequently produce dreadful effects, as the deſtruction of whole cities, the ſwallowing up, or overturning mountains, &c.

Naturaliſts, ſome of them, aſcribe Earthquakes to water, others to fire, and all of them with ſome reaſon. Nay,

1. The earth itſelf may be the cauſe of its own ſhaking, when the roots or baſis of ſome large maſs being diſſolved or worn away by a fluid underneath, it ſinks into the ſame, and by its weight cauſes a tremour, produces a noiſe, and frequently an inundation of water.

2. The ſubterraneous waters may occaſion earthquakes by their cutting out new courſes, &c. or the water being heated or rarify'd by the ſubterraneous fires, may emit fumes, blaſts, &c. and may cauſe great concuſſions.

3. The air may be the cauſe of earthquakes; for the air being a collection of fumes and vapours raiſed from the earth and water, if it be pent up in too narrow viſcera of the earth, either the ſubterraneous heat, or its own native one rarifying and expanding it, the force wherewith it endeavours to eſcape, may cauſe a ſhaking of the earth.

4. Fire is a principal cauſe of earthquakes; both as it produces the ſubterraneous air or vapours before-mentioned; and as this aura, air or ſpirit, from the different matter and compoſition of which, ſulphur, bitumen, and other inflammable matters do ariſe, takes fire, by either ſome other fire it meets withal, or from its colliſion againſt hard bodies, or by its being intermixed with other fluids; by which means burſting out into a larger compaſs, the ſpace becomes too narow for it, and ſo preſſing againſt it on all ſides, it cauſes a ſhaking of the contiguous parts, till having made itſelf a paſſage, it ſpreads itſelf in a volcano.

There being much ſulphur and bitumen, and ſuch like combuſtible matter in many places of the bowels of the earth, it is no hard matter to imagine how it ſhould inkindle, which tho' it may be done ſeveral ways, I ſhall inſtance but in one. Since the earth contains ſuch different matters in it, it may be eaſily imagined that there are caverns in ſome places, which are filled with no other matter but groſs airs, and ſulphureous or bituminous vapours, and it may ſo happen that a flint ſhall drop from the arch of the cavern to another flint below, and ſtrike fire out of it, which ſhall either enflame the vapour, or the ſulphureous and bituminous matter thereabouts, which when they have once taken fire, keep it in very long, and communicate it to other bodies of a like nature, and when theſe get vent, they burſt out in very violent eruptions, as has been ſeen in Ætna, Veſuvius, and other places.

But when it ſo happens that in vaſt caverns the vapours and thicker matter take fire all at once, the air in ſuch a motion cannot rarify and diſperſe, but it muſt give a ſudden concuſſion to the upper part of the caverns, and make all the ground above it to tremble, and cauſe an earthquake; and the deeper the mine lies, and the larger the quantity of matter is, which takes fire at one time, the more violent and extenſive is the earthquake.

But if the cavern happens to be near the ſurface of the earth, there are many times eruptions of fire that conſume the bowels of it, ſo that the ground ſinks in; and where the opening is wide enough, trees and horſes are ſwallow'd up in it, as it happened in Jamaica in the year 1692.

And this is not bare conjecture, but is confirmed by experience, for the great eruptions of the famous burning mountains are always attended with an earthquake in the neighbourhood, as they in Naples and the places thereabouts, have experienced.

EA'RTHY [eaꝛðiȝ, Sax.] conſiſting or made of earth, of the nature of earth.

EARTHY Triplicity [with Aſtrol.] the ſigns Taurus, Virgo, and Capricorn.

EA'RTHLY [eaꝛðlic, Sax.] of or pertaining to the earth.

EA'RWIG [eaꝛƿiȝȝa, Sax.] an inſect.

EASE [aiſe, ȝeaȝ eaſy, Sax. of otium, L. Menag.] reſt, freedom from pain, &c. labour of body or trouble of mind.

To EASE [of aiſe, F.] to give or cauſe eaſe or reſt; alſo to ſlacken or let looſe.

To EASE the Helm [Sea Phraſe] is to let the ſhip bear to fall to the leeward.

To EASE a Ship, is to ſlacken the ſhrowds when they are too ſtiff.

EASE the Bow-line } [Sea Terms] ſignify let them be EASE the Sheet } more ſlack.

EA'SEL [with Painters] a wooden frame on which they place their cloth to be painted.

EASEL PIECES [with Painters] are ſuch ſmall pieces either portraits or landskips, as are painted on the painter's eaſel (which is a frame on which the ſtrained canvaſs is placed) ſo called in diſtinction from thoſe larger pictures that are drawn on the walls or cielings of rooms, &c.

EASEMENT [of aiſe, F.] an eaſing; alſo a refreſhment.

EASEMENT [in Law] a ſervice which one neighbour has of another by charter or preſcription, without profit, as a ſink, a paſſage thro' his ground or the like.

EASEMENT [aiſement, F.] a privy or houſe of office.

EA'SINESS [of aiſe, F. eaſe, and the term neſs] facility; alſo ſoft or mild quality or temper.

EAST [eaſt, Sax.] that quarter of the earth where the ſun riſes.

EA'STER [Eaſter, of Eaſtre or Oſtre, Sax. a god worſhipped by the Saxons, and in honour of whom ſacrifices were offered about that time of the year] among chriſtians it is a ſolemn feſtival appointed to be obſerved in commemoration of the death and ſufferings of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt.

EASTER Offerings, money paid to the pariſh-prieſt at Eaſter.

EA'STERLINGS, people who liv'd eaſterly of England, eſpecially merchants of the Hans towns of Germany, whence Eaſterling money, that which we commonly call Sterling or current money, from a certain coin K. Richard I. cauſed to be ſtamped in thoſe parts, and which was in great eſteem for its purity.

EA'SY [of aiſe, F.] at eaſe, contented; alſo ready, mild, &c.

To EAT [of eatan, æſtan, Sax.] to feed.

An EAT-BEE, a ſmall inſect that feeds on bees.

EA'TABLE [of eatan, Sax. to eat, and able] that may be eaten.

EAVES [eaux, F. or of ea, Sax. water] the edges of the tiling of an houſe.

EAVES [with Architects] a flat, ſquare member of a cornice.

EAVES Dropper, one who clandeſtinely liſtens under the eaves, at the windows, doors, &c. of a houſe, to hear the private affairs of a family, in order to cauſe animoſities among neighbours; a tale-bearer, a pick-thank.

E'BEN-Tree, an Indian tree that has neither leaves nor fruit.

E'BENUS [הבנים, Heb.] the eben-tree, an Indian and Æthiopian tree that bears neither leaves nor fruit; the wood of which (call'd Ebony) is as black as jet, and very hard, and ſo heavy, that the leaſt ſlip of it will ſink in water.

EBEREMO'TH } [ebeſne-moꝛꝺ, Sax.] downright EBEREMU'RDER } murder.

EBI'ONITES [ſo called of one Ebion their ring-leader] hereticks who deny'd the divinity of our Saviour, and rejected all the goſpels, but that of St. Mark.

EBI'SCUS, the herb Marſh-mallows.

E'BONIST [ebeniſte, F.] a worker in Ebony wood.

E'BONY [Ebene, F. of Hebenum, L. of הבנים, Heb.] a ſort of black wood of the Ebony-tree.

EBRI'ETY [ebrietas, L.] drunkenneſs.

EBRIO'SITY [ebrioſitas, L.] drunkenneſs.

To EBU'LLIATE [ebulliare, L.] to bubble out.

EBU'LLIENCY, an ebullition, a boiling or bubbling up.

EBULLI'TION, any inward violent motion of the parts of a fluid, cauſed by the ſtruggling of particles of different qualities, F. of L.

EBULLI'TION [with Chymiſts] the great ſtruggling or effervescence, which ariſes from the mixture of an acid and alkalizate liquor.

E'BULUM } [with Botaniſts] the herb Wall-wort, Dane-

EBU'RNEAN [eburneus, L.] of ivory.

EBRI'LLADE [in Horſemanſhip] is a check of a bridle, which is given to the horſe by a jerk of one rein, when he refuſes to turn, F.

ECARTELE' [in Heraldry] ſignifies quarterly, F.

ECAVESSA'DE [with Horſemen] ſignifies a jerk of the caveſſon, F.

E'CBASIS [ἔκβασις, Gr.] a going out, an event.

ECBASIS [with Rhetoricians] is a figure, called Digreſſion.

ECBOLI'A } [of ἐκβάλλω to caſt out, Gr.] medicines
ECBOLI'NA } that facilitate delivery to women in

ECCATHA'RTICKS [ἐκκαθαρτικὰ, of ἐκκαθαίρω to purge out, Gr.] purging medicines.

ECCACHI'SMA, a bath of hot water, in which the patient ſits.

ECCE'NTRICK } [ἐκκεντρικὸς, Gr.] that has not the ECCE'NTRICAL } ſame centre.

ECCENTRICK Circles [with Aſtronomers] are ſuch circles that have not the ſame centre, of which kind ſeveral orbits were invented by the ancients to ſolve the appearances of the heavenly bodies.

ECCENTRICK Equation [in the Old Aſtronomy] is the ſame with the Proſthaphæreſis, and is equal to the difference of the ſun's or planet's real or apparent places, counted on an arch of the ecliptick.

ECCENTRI'CITY [of ἐκ and κέντρον, Gr.] the diſtance of the centres of eccentrick circles from one another.

ECCENTRI'CITY [in the Ptolemaick Aſtronomy] is that part of the Linea apſidum, which lies between the centre of the earth, and the eccentrick, i. e. that circle which the ſun is ſuppoſed to move in about our earth, and which hath not the earth exactly for its centre.

ECCENTRICITY Simple or Single [in the New Elliptical Aſtronomy] is the diſtance between the centre of the Ellipſis and the Focus, or between the ſun and the centre of the eccentrick.

ECCENTRICITY Double, is the diſtance betweeen the Foci or naval points in the Ellipſis, and is equal to twice the ſingle electricity.

ECCENTRICK Equation [in the Old Aſtronomy] is an angle made by a line drawn from the centre of the earth, and another drawn from the centre of the Eccentrick, to the body or place of any planet.

ECCENTRICK Place of a Planet [Aſtron.] is that very point of the orbit where the circle of inclination coming from the place of a planet in his orbit, falls with right angles.

E'CCHO, ſee Echo.

ECCHY'MOMA [ἔκχυμωμα, Gr.] a chymical extract.

ECCHY'MOMA } [ἐκχύμωσις, of ἐκ and χυμοὶ juices,
ECCHY'MOSIS } Gr.] an appearance of marks or ſpots in the skin, proceeding from extravaſated blood.

ECCLE'SIA [ἐκκλησία, Gr.] a church or aſſembly of people met together to worſhip God; alſo the place ſet apart for that uſe.

ECCLE'SIÆ ſculptura [in ſome Old Records] ſignified a ſculpture or image of a church made of metal, and kept as ſacred as a relique, L.

ECCLE'SIARCH [Eccleſiarcha, L. Ἐκκλησιαρχὴς, Gr.] the ruler or head of a church.

ECCLESIA'STICAL [Ἐκκλησιαστὴς, Gr. i. e. the preacher] the title of one of the books in holy ſcripture, written by Solomon.

ECCLESIA'STICAL [Eccleſiaſticus, L. ἐκκλησιαστικὸς, Gr.] of or pertaining to the church.

ECCLESIA'STICALLY [Eccleſiaſtiquement, F.] according to the manner of the church.

An ECCLESIA'STICK, a church-man, or clergy-man.

ECCLESIA'STICUS, an apocryphal ſcripture, written by Jeſus the ſon of Sirach.

E'CCO [in Muſick Books] the repetition of ſome part of a ſong or tune in a very low or ſoft manner, in imitation of a real or natural eccho.

ECCOPE' [ἐκκοπὴ of ἐκκόπτω, to cut off, Gr.] a cutting off.

ECCOPE [with Surgeons] a cutting off any member or part of the body.

ECCOPRO'TICKS [eccoprotica, L. ἐκκοπρωτικὰ, Gr.] medicines of a lenitive or aſſwaging quality.

ECCRIMOCRI'TICKS [Eccrimocritica, L.] ſigns for making making a judgment of diſtempers, from particular excretions or diſcharges of humours.

E'CRISIS [Ἔκκρισις, Gr.] a ſecretion of the excrements in an animal body.

E'CDICUS [Ἔκδικος, Gr.] an attorney or proctor of a corporation; a recorder, Civil Law.

ECHAPE' [with Horſemen] a horſe gotten between a ſtallion and a mare of a different breed, and different countries, F.

ECHARPE' [in Gunnery] as to batter en echarpe, ſignifies to batter obliquely or ſideways, F.

To E'CHE, to encreaſe, add or help out.

ECHI'NATE Seeds [with Botaniſts] are ſuch ſeeds of plants as are prickly and rough.

ECHINA'TUS [with Botaniſts] prickly, as when the ſeed veſſel is ſet round with prickles, like a hedge-hog, as the ſeeds of a ſort of medica are, which are therefore by ſeeds-men called hedge-hogs.

ECHINA'TUM [with Botaniſts] prickly trefoil, that is, the trefoil with prickly ſeed, L.

ECHINOMELOCA'CIAS [with Botaniſts] the Indian plant called Melocarducus, L.

ECHINOPHTHALMI'A [of Ἐχῖνος a ſea hedge-hog, and ὀφθαλμία a diſeaſe in the eyes] an imperfection of the eyes, when the eye-lids are ſet with hairs, as the Echinus is with prickles.

ECHI'NUS, an hedge-hog or urchin, L.

ECHINUS [in Botany] the prickly head or cover of the ſeed, on the top of any plant, ſo called of its likeneſs to a hedge-hog.

ECHI'NUS [in Architecture] a member or ornament taking its name from the roughneſs of its carving, reſembling the prickly rind of a cheſnut] firſt placed on the top of the Ionick capital; but now uſed in cornices of the Ionick, Corinthian and Compoſit Orders, conſiſting of anchors, darts, and ovals or eggs, carved. The ſame that the Engliſh call quarter round, the French ove, and the Italians ovolo.

E'CHION } [with Botaniſts] the plant called viper's
ECHIUM } bugloſs, viper's-herb or wild borage, L.

ECHIQUETTE' [in Heraldry] checky, which ſee, L.

E'CHITES [of Ἔχις, a viper, Gr.] a precious ſtone, of a darkiſh green colour, ſomewhat reſembling a viper; alſo an herb, a kind of clivers.

ECHO [Ἠχώ, Gr. i. e. the reſounding of the voice.]

ECHO [with Architects] is applied to certain kinds of vaults and arches moſt commonly of elliptical or parabolical figures, uſed to redouble ſounds, and produce artificial echoes.

Single ECHO, is that which returns the voice but once.

Tonical ECHO, an echo which will not return the voice, but when modulated into ſome peculiar muſical note.

Polyſyllabical ECHO, an echo that returns many ſyllables, words and ſentences.

ECHO, a nymph (according to the poets) who was never ſeen by any eye, whom Pan the god of ſhepherds fell in love with, and who (as Ovid feigns) pined away with grief, by reaſon that Narciſſus, with whom ſhe was deeply in love, contemned her; and was afterwards turned into a flower, retaining nothing, except only her voice.

Manifold ECHO } an Echo which returns ſyllables
Tautological ECHO } and words, the ſame oftentimes repeated.

E'CHO [in Poetry] a kind of compoſition wherein the laſt words or ſyllables of each verſe contain ſome meaning, which being repeated apart, anſwers to ſome queſtion or other matter contained in the verſe, as in Legendo Cicerone ——one ὀνὴ, Aſs.

ECHO'ICUS Verſus, a verſe which returns the laſt ſyllable like an echo, as grata malis lis, L.

ECHO'METRE [of Ἠχὼ ſound, and μέτρον, meaſure] a ſcale or rule divided on it, which ſerves to meaſure the duration or length of ſounds, and to find their intervals and ratio's.

ECHUS [in Muſick Books] the ſame as echo.

ECLAIRCI'SSEMENT, a making clear, an explanation or unfolding, F.

ECLE'GMA } [ἐκλείγμα of ἐκ and λείχω, Gr. to lick]
ECLI'GMA } a tincture or lohock, a kind of medicine to be licked or ſucked in; being a liquid compoſition, thicker than a ſyrup, but thinner than an electuary, L.

ECLI'PSE [Eclipſis, L. ἔκλειψος of ἐκλείπειν, Gr. to fail] a failing of light in the ſun or moon, F.

Central ECLI'PSE of the Moon [with Aſtronomers] is when not only the intire body of the moon is covered by the ſhadow; but alſo the center of the moon paſſes through the centre of that circle, which is made by a plane cutting the cone of the earth's ſhadow at right angles, with the axis, or with that line, which joins the centres of the ſun and the earth.

A Partial ECLIPSE, is when either of thoſe noble lights, the ſun or moon, are darkned only in part.

Total ECLIPSE, is when they are eclipſed or darkned wholly; although the eclipſe of the ſun is not properly univerſal, but is varied ſo as to be either greater or leſſer, according to the diverſity of the climate.

Lunar ECLIPSE, is the taking of the ſun's light from the moon, occaſioned by the interpoſition of the body of the earth between the moon and the ſun.

Solar ECLIPSE, is when it happens, that we are depriv'd of light by the interpoſition or coming in of the moon's body between it and our ſight.

To ECLI'PSE [eclipticare, L. eclipſer, Fr.] to darken, to obſcure.

ECLI'PSIS [with Phyſicians] a failing of the ſpirits, a fainting or ſwooning away, a qualm, L.

ECLIPSIS [ἔκλειψις, Gr.] a figure in grammar when a word is wanting in a ſentence.

ECLI'PTICK [Eclipticus, L. Ἐκλειπτικὸν, of ἐκλείπω, Gr. to leave] a great circle of the ſphere ſuppoſed to be drawn through the middle of the Zodiack, and ſo called becauſe the eclipſes of the ſun and moon always happen under it. For the ſun in his yearly courſe never departs from this line, as all the other planets do more or leſs.

The ECLIPTICK [in the New Aſtronomy] is that path or way amidſt the fixt ſtars, that the earth appears to deſcribe to an eye, ſuppoſed to be placed in the ſun, as in its yearly motion it runs round the ſun from Weſt to Eaſt, and if this circle be divided into 12 equal parts, they will be the 12 ſigns, each of which is diſtinguiſhed by ſome conſtellation or cluſter of ſtars.

ECLOGA'RIUS, a learned man, who has made abundance of extracts from authors.

E'CLOGUE [Ecloga, L. ἐκλογὴ, Gr. i. e. a choice piece] a kind of paſtoral compoſition, wherein ſhepherds are introduced converſing together.

E'CLYSIS [ἐκλύσις, Gr.] a looſing, releaſing, diſſolving.

ECLYSIS [with Phyſicians] is when the ſtrength of the patient is a little decayed, proceeding from a want of ſufficient warmth and ſpirits in bodies.

ECOUTE' [with Horſemen] liſtening, a pace or motion. A horſe is ſaid to be ecoute, when he rides well upon the hand and heels, compactly put upon his haunches, and hears and liſtens to the heels or ſpurs, and continues duly balanced, between the heels without throwing to either ſide, F.

ECPHA'SIS [Ἔκφασις, Gr.] a plain declaration or interpretation of a thing.

ECPHO'NEMA [Ἐκφώνημα, Gr.] a rhetorical figure, a breaking out of the voice, with ſome interjectional particle.

ECPHO'NESIS [Ἔκφωνησις, Gr.] an exclamation.

ECPHONESIS [in Rhetorick] a figure by which the orator expreſſes the vehement tranſport of his own mind, and excites the affections of thoſe to whom he ſpeaks.

ECPHO'RA [with Architects] the line or diſtance between the extremity of a member or moulding, and the naked of a column or other part it projects from.

ECPHRA'CTICKS [Ἐκφρακτικὰ of ἐκφράσσω, Gr. to open] medicines proper for opening obſtructions and ſtoppages.

E'CPHRAXIS [Ἔκφραξις, Gr.] a removing or taking away of obſtructions.

ECPHY'SESIS [Ἐκφύσησις, Gr.] a breathing thick, or fetching the breath thick.

ECPHYSE'SIS [with Surgeons] any proceſs or knob that is joined with, or adheres to a bone.

ECPHY'SIS [Ἔκφυσις of ἐκφύω, to grow out, Gr.] a riſing or ſpringing up; a budding or ſprouting forth.

ECPHYSIS [in Anatomy] that part where the guts take riſe from the lower orifice of the ſtomach or pylorus.

ECPI'ESMA [Ἔκπίεσμα, Gr.] a juice preſſed out, or the remaining dregs of any thing that is ſqueezed.

ECPIESMA [in Surgery] a fracture of the ſcull, wherein the broken parts preſs upon the meninges or skin of the brain.

ECPI'ESMUS [ἐκπνεσμὸς, Gr.] a ſtraining, wringing or ſqueezing out, L.

ECPIESMUS [with Oculiſts] a very great protuberance or bunching out of the eyes.

E'CPLEXIS [Ἔκπληξις, Gr.] aſtoniſhment, conſternation, great fright; a diſtraction of mind proceeding from ſome outward diſturbance.

ECPNEUMA'TOSIS [Ἐκπνευμάτοσις, Gr.] the faculty of breathing out.

ECPNOE [Ἔκπνοη, of ἐκ and πνέω, Gr. to breathe] a difficulty of breathing.

E'CPTOMA [Ἔκπτωμα, Gr.] a being out of joynt as the bones.

E'CPTOSIS [ἔκπτωσις, of ἐκ and πίπτω to fall, Gr.] a falling or ſlipping down

ECPY'CTICA [Ἐκπυκτικά, Gr.] medicines of a thickening quality.

ECPY'ESMA [Ἔκπύεσμα, Gr.] the ſame as Empyeſma.

ECRI'THMUS [of ἐξ and ἀριθμὸς, Gr. number] a pulſe that obſerves no method or order.

ECSA'RCOMA [Ἐκσάρκωμα, of Ἐκ from, and σὰρξ, fleſh, Gr.] the growing of fleſh in any part.

E'CSTACY } [ἔκστασις, Gr.] properly ſignifies the remo-
E'XTACY } val of a thing from the ſtate in which it was to another; a ſwoon or tranſport of mind, L.

ECSTA'TICAL } [Ἐκστατικὸς, Gr.] of or pertaining to ECSTA'TICK } extaſy.

ECTA'SIS [Ἔκτασις, Gr.] an extenſion or ſtretching out.

ECTASIS [with Grammarians] a figure whereby a ſhort ſyllable is extended or made long.

E'PICK Poem, is a diſcourſe invented with art, to form the manners of men by inſtruction, deſigned under the allegories of ſome important action, which is related in verſe, after a probable, diverting and wonderful manner. Boſſu thus defines it; and it agrees very well with our idea of an Epick poem. Tho' Ariſtotle ſays Epick poetry makes uſe of diſcourſes in verſe and proſe, and M. Dacier agrees with him; but we in England have all our poetry in verſe at leaſt, if not in Rhime. And we rank diſcourſes in proſe, altho' there may be the texture of a fiction in them, among what we call fables, and allow nothing to be Epick poetry, but what is in verſe. See Heroick Poem.

Epick poeſy is not confined to obſerve unities of time and place. Ariſtotle ſays it has no ſettled time, and in that it differs from the Dramatick. And as to unity of place, that need not be obſerved, becauſe the poem is read as an hiſtory, which may be left off by the reader at pleaſure.

EPICK Poet, one who writes ſuch verſes.

EPITRO'CHASMUS [with Rhetoricians] a figure, wherein the orator runs haſtily over ſeveral things, either for brevity-ſake, as Cæſar invaded the borders, took the city and purſued Pompey; or elſe to amaze thoſe he ſpeaks to; as ſtand ſtill ſirs; what brought you this way? who are you that appear in arms? whither are you marching?

EPI'TROPE [ἐπιτροπὴ of ἐπιτρέπω, Gr. to grant] permiſſion, a committing of an affair to one's management.

EPI'TROPE [with Rhetoricians] is a figure, when the orator grants, what he may freely deny, in order to obtain what he demands. This figure is ſometimes uſed to move an enemy, and ſet before his view, the horror of his cruelty. To this end he is invited to do all the miſchief he can.

EPIZEU'GMENON. See Diezeugmenon.

EPIZEU'XIS [ἐπιζεύξις, Gr.] a joining together.

EPLOYE' [in Heraldry] diſplay'd, as Aigle Eployé, is an eagle diſplay'd, which is not always to have 2 heads. But as in the eſcutcheon. See Diſplayed in D.

EPNEUMA'TOSIS [ἐπνευμάτωσις, Gr.] expiration, the act or faculty of breathing out, L.

EPO'CH } [ἐποχὴ of ἐπέχειν, Gr. to ſuſtain or ſtop]
E'POCHA } a chronological term for a fixt point of time, whence the years are numbred or accounted; or a ſolemn date of time counted from ſome memorable action, as the creation of the world, &c.

Julian EPOCHA, takes its name from the emperor Julius Cæſar's reformation of the Roman Calendar; which was done 45 years before the birth of Chriſt, in the year 708. from the building of Rome, and in the 731ſt Olympiad.

EPOCHA of Chriſt, is the common epocha throughout Europe, commencing from the nativity of our Saviour December 25, or rather according to the vulgar account from his Circumciſion the 1ſt of January; but in England from the incarnation or annunciation of the Virgin Mary on the 25th of March.

EPOCHA of the Creation, according to the computation of the Jews, is the year of the Julian period, 953, anſwering to the year before Chriſt, 3761, and commences on the 7th of October.

Dioclesian EPOCHA, or the Epocha of Martyrs, is the year of the Julian period 4997, anſwering to the year of Chriſt 283. It is ſo called from the great number of Chriſtians who ſuffered martyrdom under the reign of that emperor.

Arabick EPOCHA } takes its beginning from the flight
Turkiſh EPOCHA } of the impoſtor Mahomet, from Mecca in Arabia, July the 16th, An. Ch. 622.

Abaſſine EPOCHA, began much about the ſame time as the Dioclesian epocha began.

Perſian EPOCHA, called alſo the Jeſdegerdick Epocha, took its date from the coronation of Jeſdegerdis the laſt Perſian king, or, as others ſay, from the Perſians being conquered by the Ottomans and Saracens, An. Ch. 632.

E'PODE [Ἐποδὸς, of ἐπὶ after and ᾠδαὶ, Gr. ſongs] one of the numbers of that ſort of Lyrick poetry, of which the odes of Pindar conſiſt. The other two being Strophe and Antiſtrophe, which anſwer each other in every ode, whereas one epode anſwers to another in ſeveral odes.

The epode was ſung by the prieſts ſtanding ſtill before the altar, after all the turns and returns of the Strophe and Antiſtrophe.

E'POMIS [Ἐπωμὶς, of ἐπὶ and ὦμος, Gr. a ſhoulder] an hood, ſuch as univerſity-ſtudents and livery-men wear.

EPOMIS [with Anat.] the upper part of the ſhoulder, otherwiſe called Acromium.

EPO'MPHALUM [Ἐπόμφαλον, of ἐπὶ and ὀμφαλὸς, Gr. a navel] a plaſter or other medicine apply'd to the navel when it ſtarts.

EPOPE'A [in Poetry] is ſtrictly the hiſtory, action or fable, which makes the ſubject of an Epick poem.

E'PULARY [epularis, L.] of or pertaining to a feaſt or banquet.

EPULA'TION, a feaſting or banqueting, L.

E'PULIS [Ἔπουλις, of ἐπὶ and οὖλον, Gr. a gum] an exceſcence in the gums, ſo large as ſometimes to hinder the opening of the mouth.

EPULO'SITY [epuloſitas, L.] great banqueting.

EPULO'SE [epuloſus, L.] feaſting often, liberal in feaſts.

EPULO'TICKS [epulotica, L. of ἐπουλοτικὰ, of ἔπουλος, Gr. to cicatrize] medicines that ſerve to bring ſores or ulcers to an eſcar, L.

EQUABI'LITY [æquabilitas, Gr.] equality, evenneſs, ſteadineſs; alſo the exact agreement of ſome things in reſpect to quantity.

E'QUABLE [æquabilis, L.] equal, alike, or of the ſame proportion; ſteady.

EQUABLE Acceleration, is when the ſwiftneſs of any body in motion increaſes equally in equal time.

EQUABLE Motion [in Philoſophy] is ſuch a motion as always continues in the ſame degree of velocity or ſwiftneſs.

EQUABLE Retardation [in Philoſ.] is when the ſwiftneſs of ſeveral bodies is promoted or hindered, and is exactly and uniformly the ſame in all.

E'QUABLENESS [æquabilitas, L.] capableneſs of being made equal.

E'QUABLY, equally.

E'QUAL [æqualis, L.] like, even, juſt.

AN EQUAL [æqualis, L.] one who is upon the ſame level with another.

To E'QUAL [æquare, L.] to make equal, to anſwer, to be agreeable to.

EQUAL Angles [Geometry] are thoſe whoſe ſides incline alike to each other, or that are meaſured by ſimilar parts of their circles.

EQUAL Circles, are ſuch whoſe diameters are equal.

EQUAL Figures, are thoſe whoſe area's are equal, whether the figures be ſimilar or not.

EQUAL Hyperbola's, are thoſe whoſe ordinates to their determinate axes are equal to each other, taken at equal distances from their vertices.

EQUAL Solids, are those which comprehend and contain each as much as the other, or whose solidities and capacities are equal.

EQUAL Arithmetical Ratio's, are such wherein the difference of the two less terms is equal to the difference of the two greater.

EQUA'LITY } [æqualitas, L.] a being equal or like,
E'QUALNESS } a likeness, agreeableness.

Circle of EQUALITY [with Astron.] a circle used in the Ptolemaick system, to account for the eccentricity of the planets, and reduce them to a Calculus with the greater ease; this is called also the Circle of the Equant.

Proportion of EQUALITY evenly ranged, is such wherein two terms in a rank or series are proportional to as many terms of another rank, compared to each other in the same order, i. e. the first of one rank to the first of another, the second to the second, and so on, called in Latin, Proportio ex æquo ordinata.

Proportion of EQUALITY evenly disturbed, is such wherein more than two terms of a rank are proportional to as many terms of another rank, compared to each other in a different, interrupted or disturbed order, viz. the first of one rank to the second of another, the second to the third, &c. called in Latin, Proportio ex æquo perturbata.

EQUA'LITY [emblematically] was represented by a lady lighting 2 torches at once.

EQUA'LITY [with Mathematicians] the exact agreement of 2 things in respect to quantity.

EQUALITY [with Algebraists] is a comparison of 2 quantities which are equal both really and representatively, i. e. equal in both effects and letters.

To E'QUALIZE, to make shares equal, to compare.

E'QUALNESS [æqualitas, L.] equality.

EQUANI'MITY } [æquanimitas, L.] evenness of EQUA'NIMOUSNESS } mind, contentedness; a calm and quiet temper upon all events of fortune, either good or bad.

EQUA'NIMOUS [æquanimis, L.] endowed with equanimity.

E'QUANT [in Astronomy] a circle imagined by Astronomers in the plane of the deferent or eccentrick, for the regulating and adjusting certain motions of the planets.

EQUA'PIUM [with Botanists] the herb alisander or lovage, L.

EQUA'TION [æquatio, L.] a making equal, an equal division.

EQUATION [in Algebra] an expression of the same quantity in 2 different that is dissimilar, but equal terms or denominations, as 3 s= to 36 d.

EQUATION [with Astronomers] is taken from the proportion or regulation of time, or the difference between the time marked out by the sun's apparent motion, and the time that is measured by its real or middle motion; according to which clocks and watches ought to be adjusted.

EQUA'TION or Optical Prosthaphæresis [in the Ptolemaick theory of the planets] is the angle made by two lines drawn from the centre of the epicycle to the centres of the world and of the eccentrick.

EQUATION or Physical Prosthaphæresis, is the difference between the motions of the centre of the epicycle in the equant and in the eccentrick.

EQUATION or Total Prosthaphæresis, is the difference between the planets mean and true motion, or the angle made by the lines of the true and mean motion of the centre.

EQUATION of Time, is the difference between the sun's true longitude and his right ascension, or the difference between mean and apparent time.

EQUA'TOR [æquator, L.] the equinoctial line, and the same that by mariners is called the line by way of excellency, a great movable circle of the sphere equally distant from the two poles of the world, or that divides the heaven or globe of the universe into two equal parts north and south.

EQUE'RY } [ecuyer, F.] an officer who has the care
EQUE'RRY } and management of the horses of a king or prince; also a grand stable for horses furnished with all conveniencies; also the lodgings or apartments of the equerries or grooms.

EQUES, a horseman, a man of arms; a Roman knight of a middle order between the commonalty and peerage.

EQUES Auratus [i. e. a gilded knight] the Latin term for an English knight, because in ancient times none but knights were allowed to gild their armour and other military furniture.

EQUE'STRIAN [equestris, L.] of or pertaining to a horseman or knight.

EQUIA'NGULAR [of æquus and angulus, L.] that has equal angles or corners.

EQUICRU'RAL [of æquus and cruralis, L.] that has equal legs or sides.

EQUI'CULUS } [with Astronomers] i. e. the little horse;
E'QUUS minor } a northern constellation consisting of four stars, L.

EQUIDI'FFERENT [Arithmetick] if in a series of three quantities there be the same difference between the first and second as between the second and third, they are said to be continually equidifferent; thus 3, 6, 9 are continually equidifferent.

Discretely EQUIDI'FFERENT, is if in a series of four quantities there is the same difference between the first and second as between the third and fourth; thus 3, 6, 7 and 10 are discretely equidifferent.

EQUIDI'STANT [of æquus and distans, L.] that is, of an equal distance; equally distant from another thing.

EQUIDI'STANTNESS [of æquus and distantia, L.] being equidistant.

EQUIFO'RMITY [of æquus and forma, L.] likeness in form.

EQUILA'TERAL [æquilaterus, L.] equal-sided, or whose sides are all equal.

EQUIL'ATERAL Hyperbola, one whose asymptotes do always intersect each other at right angles in the centre. If the transverse diameter of any hyperbola be equal to its Parameter, then all the other diameters will also be equal to their Parameters.

EQUILI'BRITY [æquilibritas, L.] equal weight or poise.

In EQUILI'BRIO [in Mechanism] when the two ends of a ballance hang exactly even and level, so that they neither can ascend or descend, they are said to be in æquilibrio.

EQUILI'BRIUM [æquilibrium, L.] equality of weight and poise, equal ballance.

EQUIMU'LTIPLES [in Arithmetick and Geometry] are numbers and quantities multiplied by one and the same number and quantity; or such numbers or quantities as contain their submultiples an equal number of times; as 12 and 6 are equal multiples of their submultiples 4 and 2, inasmuch as each of them contains its submultiple three times.

EQUINO'CTIAL [æquinoctialis, of æquus equal and nox, L. night, so called because when the sun passes through it, the day and night are of an equal length over all parts of the earth] a great and immoveable circle of the sphere under which the equator moves in its diurnal motion. The equinoctial is commonly confounded with the equator; but there is a difference; the equator being moveable, and the equinoctial immoveable, and the equator being drawn about the convex surface of the sphere; but the equinoctial on the concave surface of the magnus orbis.

EQUINOCTIAL Dial, is that whose plain lies parallel to the equinoctial.

EQUINOCTIAL Points [Astron.] are the two points where the equator and ecliptick intersect each other.

EQUINOCTIAL Colure, is that passing through the equinoctial points.

E'QUINOXES [of æquus and nox, L.] the precise times in which the sun enters the first points of Aries and Libra, when the day and night are of equal length.

The Autumnal Equinox, is on the 12th of September.

The Vernal EQUINOX, is on the 10th of March.

To EQUI'P [equipper, F.] to provide necessaries, to furnish; to set forth, to set or fit out for a voyage, &c.

E'QUIPAGE, the provision of all things necessary for a voyage or journey; as a ship's crew, furniture, attire, attendance, &c.

EQUI'PARABLE [of æquus and comparabilis, L.] comparable.

EQUI'PARATES [æquiparata, L.] things compared or made equal.

EQUIPOI'SE [equipoids, F] an equal weight.

EQUI'POLLENCE } [æquipollentia, L.] a logical
EQUIPO'LLENTNESS } term used when several propositions signify one and the same thing, tho' it be expressed after different manners, as not every man is learned, some man is learned.

EQUIPO'LLENT [æquipollens, L.] being of equal force or signification.

EQUIPO'NDERANCY [of æquipondium, L.] an equal weighing or poising.

EQUI-

EQUIPO'NDERANT [of æquè and ponderans, L.] equally ballancing or poiſing.

EQUIPO'NDEROUS [of æquè and ponderoſus, L.] that is of equal weight.

EQUIPO'NDEROUSNESS [æquipondium, L.] the being of equal weight.

EQUIPPE [in Heraldry] ſignifies a knight equipped, i. e. armed at all points.

EQUI'PPED [equippé, F.] furniſhed, accouter'd, &c.

EQUI'RIA, certain games celebrated at Rome in the month of March with horſe-races, like our juſts and tournaments in honour of Mars in Mars's field.

E'QUITABLE, juſt, righteous, reaſonable, F.

E'QUITABLENESS [of equitable, F.] righteouſneſs, juſtneſs, reaſonableneſs.

EQUITATU'RA [Old Lat. Rec.] a liberty of riding or carrying griſt and meal from a mill on horſe-back.

E'QUITY [æquitas, L.] the virtue of treating all men according to the rules of right reaſon and juſtice.

EQUITY and Juſtice [Hieroglyphically] was repreſented by a ſwallow, becauſe that bird diſtributes its meat equally to its young ones.

EQUITY [Hieroglyphically] is alſo repreſented by a pair of ſcales or ballance.

EQUITY [in a Law ſenſe] has a double and contrary meaning, for one enlarges and adds to the letter of the law, extending the words of it to caſes unexpreſſed, yet having the ſame reaſon; whereas the other abridges and takes from it; ſo that the latter is defined to be a correction of the law, generally made in that part wherein it fails.

Court of EQUITY, is the court of Chancery, in which the rigour of the common law and the ſeverity of other courts is moderated; and where controverſies are ſuppoſed to be determined according to the exact rules of equity and conſcience.

EQUI'VALENCE [æquivalentia, L] the agreement in nature, quality or circumſtances between ſeveral things propoſed.

EQUI'VALENT [æquivalens, L.] of equal worth or value.

EQUI'VOCA Equivocantia, words common to ſeveral things in a very different ſignification, i. e. to ſeveral things which have a ſimilar eſſence, correſponding to the ſimilar denomination; as taurus a bull, and taurus the conſtellation, and mount Taurus.

EQUI'VOCAL [æquivocus, L.] having a double or doubtful ſignification; or that the ſenſe of which may be taken ſeveral ways.

EQUI'VOCALS [æquivoca, L.] equivocal terms (with Logicians) are ſuch terms whoſe names are the ſame, but their natures very different.

EQUI'VOCAL Generation [with Philoſophers] is the production of plants without ſeeds; inſects or animals without parents in the natural way of copulation between male and female, which is now believed never to happen; but that all bodies are produced univocally.

EQUI'VOCAL Signs [with Surgeons] are certain accidents or ſigns of the fracture of the ſcull, which confirm other ſigns called Univocal.

EQUIVOCAL Word [with Grammarians] a word that comprehends more ſignifications than one, or which ſerves for different notions.

EQUI'VOCALLY [æquivocè, L.] dubiouſly, ambiguouſly; alſo with a mental reſervation.

EQUI'VOCALNESS [of æquivocus, L.] equivocal quality, or being of the ſame name but different quality.

To EQUI'VOCATE [equivoquer, F.] to ſpeak doubtfully or ambiguouſly; alſo to ſay one thing and mean another.

EQUUS alatus [in Aſtronomy] the fabulous winged horſe, called Pegaſus, one of the northern conſtellations, conſiſting of 20 ſtars.

EQUUS [with Aſtronomers] a conſtellation, the former part of the horſe as far as the navel, is the only part to be ſeen. Aratus writes that he was the ſame that opened the fountain in Helicon with his hoof, which is called Hippocrene. But ſome will have him to be Pegaſus, who flew to the ſtars before the fall of Bellerophon. Which ſeems to others to be incredible, becauſe he has no wings; therefore Euripides will have him to be Menalippe, the daughter of Chiron, who was debauched by Æolus; and being with child fled into the mountains; and being about to be delivered there, her father came in ſearch after her. She being taken, that ſhe might not be known, pray'd that ſhe might be transformed; upon which ſhe was turned into a mare. And upon the account of her own piety and her father's, Diana placed her among the ſtars; and for that reaſon ſhe remains inviſible to the centaur (for he is believ'd to be Chiron) the poſterior [lower] parts of the body of this figure, becauſe of the modeſty of the womaniſh ſex, are not ſeen.

FIGURE [in Logick] is the due diſpoſing of the middle term in a ſyllogiſm with the two extremes.

FI'GURE [in Rhetorick] is when a word is uſed to ſignify a thing, which is not proper to it, and which uſe has apply'd to ſomething elſe; then that manner of expreſſion is figurative; or figures are manners of expreſſion diſtinct from thoſe that are natural and common.

FI'GURES [in Rhetorick] are not to be looked upon only as certain terms invented by Rhetoricians for the ornament of their diſcourſe. God has not denied to the ſoul, what he has granted to the body; as the body knows how to repel injuries, ſo the ſoul can defend itſelf as well, and it is not by nature immovevable, when it is attack'd; all the figures which the ſoul makes uſe of in diſcourſe, when it is moved, have the ſame effect as the poſtures of the body. Figures in diſcourſe are as proper to defend the mind, as poſtures are to defend the body in corporeal attacks.

Theatrical FIGURES [among Rhetoricians] are ſuch as bad orators affect when they meaſure their words, and give them a cadence to tickle their ears; tho' they figure their diſcourſes, yet it is with ſuch figures, which being compared to thoſe that are ſtrong and perſuaſive, are like the poſtures in a dance to thoſe in a battle. The art and affectation that appears in a painted diſcourſe, ſays a certain author, are not the character of a ſoul truly touch'd with the things it ſpeaks of, but under no concern at all.

FIGURES of Diſcourſe, are extraordinary ways of ſpeaking very different from the common and natural.

FIGURES of Words [among Rhetoricians] are quite different from figures of diſcourſe; for figures of diſcourſe are produced chiefly by the agitations of the ſoul; figures of words are the effect of the calmneſs and ſtudy of the mind. A figure of words conſiſts ſometimes in the repetition of the ſame word, the ſame letter, and the ſame ſound, which tho' it is often diſagreeable, yet never ſhocks when the repetition is made with art. This repetition is made ſometimes in the beginning of ſentences, ſometimes in the middle, and ſometimes in the end of ſentences.

FIRE [ꝼÿꝛe, Sax. πῦρ, Gr.]

FIRE [with Naturaliſts] is by ſome defined to be a company of particles of the third element, moved with the moſt rapid motion imaginable; or a lucid and fluid body, conſiſting of earthy particles, moſt ſwiftly moved by the matter of the firſt element, upon which they ſwim, as it were.

Fire is not only propagated ſeveral ways, where there is none. 1. By collecting the ſun's rays in a convex-glaſs, which will ſet fire to that point, on which the rays fall, provided it be a combuſtible matter, i. e. ſuch as will burn. 2. By ſtriking flints one againſt the other or againſt ſteel. 3. By rubbing wood or iron or any other ſolid body a great while together and very hard, at laſt it will take fire; alſo by winding cords about a ſtick and ſwiftly twitching them, this way and that way, will ſet them on fire. Some hard canes ſtruck with a tobacco-pipe, will force out fire.

As to the effects of fire, they are various as the matter that feeds it. If fire be ſet to wood or looſer materials, they begin to flame; but to excite a flame, both the fire and combuſtible matter muſt have the advantage of a reaſonable free air, or elſe the fire is choaked and goes out. And tho' a place is not wholly without air, yet if that air have no communication with the open air, ſo as to go backward and forward thro' ſome paſſage, the materials ſet on fire will go out; whereas fire in an open place will continue to burn till all the fewel is ſpent. A lighted candle quickly goes out in a glaſs ſo well ſtopt that no air can come into it

FIRE of London, a dreadful conflagration in the year 1666, which began the ſecond of September, in Pudding-lane, and in three days ſpace conſumed 78 pariſh-churches, 5 chapels, and beſides halls and the Exchange, 13200 houſes; the whole loſs valued at 9900000 pounds ſterling.

FLOW'ER [among Botaniſts] is variouſly underſtood. Some mean by it thoſe fine-coloured leaves, which are called the petals, others reſtrain it to ſignify the organs of generation, the proper ſignification of it ſeems to be the organs of generation with their coverings.

To FLOW'ER [florere, L. fleurir, F.] to produce or bear flowers; alſo to mantle, as drink, &c.

FLOWERS [with Chymiſts] are the moſt ſubtile parts of dry bodies, which riſe by fire to the top of veſſels made on purpoſe to receive them, as the flowers of Benjamin, Sulphur, &c.

Amentaceous FLOWER [Flos amentaceus, L.] ſuch as hang pendulous like the Juli or Catkins, Tournefort.

Apetalous FLOWER [Flos apetalus, L] is ſuch as want the fine-coloured leaves called Petala.

Campaniform FLOWER [Flos campaniformis, L.] ſuch flower as is in the ſhape of a bell.

Caryophylleous FLOWER [Flos Caryophylleus, L.] a flower in the ſhape of a gilliflower or carnation.

Compoſit FLOWER [Flos compoſitus] a compound-flower, which conſiſts of many Floſculi, all making but one flower, is either diſcous or diſcoidal, that is, whoſe Floſculi are ſet together ſo cloſe, thick and even, as to make the ſurface of the flower plain and flat, which therefore becauſe of its compound form, will be like a diſcus; which disk is ſometimes radiated, when there are a row of Petala ſtanding round in the disk like the points of a ſtar, as in the Matricaria, Chamæmelum, &c. and ſometimes naked, having no ſuch radiating leaves round the limb of its disk, as in the Tanacetum.

Corniculated FLOWERS [Flores corniculati, L.] are ſuch hollow flowers, as have on their upper part a kind of ſpur or little horn, as the Linaria, Delphinium, &c. and the Corniculum or Calcar is always impervious at the top or point.

Cucurbitaceous FLOWER, is one that reſembles the flower of the gourd, or have the ſame conformation with it.

Cruciform FLOWER [Flos cruciformis, L.] a flower that repreſents the form of a croſs.

Diſcous FLOWERS } are thoſe whoſe Floſculi or little
Diſcodial FLOWERS } flowers are ſet together ſo cloſe, thick and even, as to make the ſurface of the flower plain and flat; which therefore becauſe of its round form will be like a diſcus or quoit.

Fiſtular FLOWER [Flos fiſtularis, L.] a flower compounded of many long hollow little flowers like pipes, all divided into large jags at the ends.

Fecund FLOWER [Flos fœcundus, L.] a fruitful flower.

Floſculous FLOWER [Flos floſculoſus, L.] a flower compoſed of many little flowers.

Imperfect FLOWERS [Flores imperfecti, L.] ſuch as want ſome of the parts as compoſe a perfect flower, either Petala, Stamina, Apex or Stylus.

Infundibuliform FLOWER [Flos infundibuliformis] a flower that reſembles a funnel in ſhape.

Labiated FLOWER [Flos labiatus, L.] is ſuch as either has but one lip only, as in the far greater part of labiated flowers, and are called alſo Galeated, Galericulate and Cucullate, which ſee above.

Liliaceous FLOWER [Flos liliaceus, L.] a flower of the lily form.

Umbelliferous FLOWER, is one which has ſeveral leaves doubled, and diſpoſed after the manner of a roſe, and calix becomes a fruit of 2 ſeeds.

Monopetalous FLOWER [Flos monopetalus, L.] is ſuch as has the body of the flower all of one intire leaf, though ſometimes cut or divided a little way into ſeeming Petala or leaves, as in borage, bugloſs, &c.

Monopetalous anomalous FLOWER [Flos monopetalus anomalus, L.] an irregular monopetalous-flower.

Papilionaceous FLOWER [Flos papilionaceus, L.] is a flower that repreſents ſomething of the Papilio or butterfly, with its wings diſplay'd. In theſe the flower-leaves or Petala are always of a difform figure being 4 in number, and joined together at the extremities; ſuch are the flowers of thoſe plants that are of the leguminous kinds, Peas, Vetches, &c.

Verticulate FLOWERS, are ſuch as are ranged in ſtories, rings or rays along the ſtems, ſuch as thoſe of hoar-hound, clary, &c.

FLOWERS [with Chymiſts] are the fineſt and moſt ſubtil parts or fine mealy matter of dry bodies, raiſed by fire into the head and aludels; and adhering to them in the form of a fine powder or duſt.

Perfect FLOWERS [Flores perfecti, L.] are ſuch as have a Petala, Stamen, Apex and Stylus; and whatever flower wants any of theſe is accounted imperfect. Theſe are divided into ſimple or compound, which are not compoſed of other ſmaller ones, and which uſually have but one ſingle ſtyle; and compounded, which conſiſt of many Floſculi, all making but one flower.

Perſonated FLOWER [Flos perſonatus, L.] a flower that ſomewhat reſembles a mouth, as the Snap-Dragon, Toad-Flax, &c.

Planifolious FLOWER [Flos planifolius, L.] ſuch as is compoſed of plain flowers ſet together in circular rows round the centre, and whoſe face is uſually indented, notched, uneven and jagged, as the Hieracchia, Sonchia, &c.

Polypetalous FLOWER [Flos polypetalus, L.] ſuch as has diſtinct Petala, and thoſe falling off ſingly and not altogether, as the ſeeming Petala of the monopetalous always do: both monopetalous and polypetalous are either uniform or difform; the former have their right and left-hand parts, and the forward and backward parts unlike; but the difform have no ſuch regularity.

Polypetalous anomalous FLOWER [Flos polypetalus anomalus, L.] an irregular polypetalous-flower.

Leguminous FLOWER, the flower of leguminous plants which bear ſome reſemblance to a flying butterfly, and thence are called Papilionaceous.

Radiated FLOWER [Flos radiatus, L.] a flower whoſe leaves grow in the manner of rays, as the Heliotropium or Sun-flower.

Spicated FLOWER [Flos ſpicatus, L.] when the flowers grow thick together length-ways at the top of the ſtalk, as an ear of corn.

Stamineous FLOWER [Flos ſtamineus, L.] a flower that only conſiſts of the Calix with ſmall threads, &c.

Sterile FLOWER [Flos ſterilis, L.] i. e. barren flower.

Rotated FLOWER [Flos rotatus, L.] ſuch whoſe flower-leaves grow like the ſpokes of a wheel.

Roſaceous FLOWER [Flos roſaceus, L.] a flower whoſe leaves grow in the form of a roſe, as the Ranunculus, &c.

Semifiſtular FLOWER [Flos ſemifiſtularis, L.] is ſuch an one whoſe upper part reſembles a pipe cut off obliquely, as in the Ariſtolochia, &c.

Galeated FLOWER } [Flos galeatus, L.] a flower that Galericulate FLOWER } reſembles an helmet or hat. In this flower the upper top is turned upwards, and ſo turns the convex part downwards as in the Chamæciſſus, &c. but moſt uſually the upper lip is convex above and turns the hollow part down to its fellow below, and ſo repreſents a monk's hood, and thence is called cucullate, as the flowers of the Lamium and moſt Verticillate plants.

FLOW'ERED, wrought with flowers.

FLOW'ERINESS, fulneſs or plenteouſneſs of flowers.

FLO'WERING [fleurant, F. flores producens, L.] producing or opening into flowers; alſo mantling as drink.

FLOW'ERY, of or pertaining to, or full of flowers; alſo of the nature of flowers.

FLOW'ERS [in Architecture] repreſentations of ſome imaginary flowers, by way of crowning or finiſhing on the top of a dome.

FLOWERS [in Rhetorick] are figures and ornaments of diſcourſe.

FLOWERS [in the Animal Oeconomy] are women's Menſes.

FLOWK wort, an herb.

FLO'WING [of ꝥleoꝑan, Sax. fluens, L.] running in a ſtream as water; abounding.

FLUCTI'FEROUS [fluctifer, L.] raiſing or bringing waves.

FLUCTI'FRAGOUS [fluctifragus, L.] wave-breaking.

FLUCTI'GEROUS [fluctiger, L.] born by the waves.

FLUCTI'SONOUS [fluctiſonus, L.] ſounding or roaring with waves or billows.

FLUCTI'VAGOUS [fluctivagus, L.] floating or toſſed on the waves.

To FLU'CTUATE [fluctuatum, to be carried, float or toſſed to and fro in the water, to be wavering and unconſtant or uncertain in mind, to be in ſuſpence.

FLU'C-

FLU'CTUATING [fluctuans, L.] floating; alſo wavering in mind.

FLUCTUO'SE } [fluctueux, F.] troubled, unquiet, reſtleſs like the waves.
FLU'CTUOUS }

FLUE, the down or ſoft hair of a rabbet; alſo little feathers or flocks which ſtick to cloaths.

FLUE, a ſmall winding chimney of a furnace, &c. carried up into a main chimney.

FLUE'LLIN, an herb, called alſo Speedwell.

FLU'ENCY [fluentia, L.] readineſs of ſpeech, volubility of tongue.

FLU'ENT [fluens, L.] flowing, voluble in ſpeech.

FLU'ENTNESS [fluentia or fluiditas, L. fluidité, F.] flowingneſs, fluency in diſcourſe, or volubility of ſpeech.

FLU'ID fluidus, L. of fluo, L. to flow, fluide, F.] flowing eaſily.

FLUID Bodies [with Naturaliſts] bodies whoſe parts eaſily give place, and move out of the way, on any force put upon them; by which means they eaſily move over one another.

FLU'IDITY } [fluiditas, L. fluidité, F.] a flowing eaſily, or aptneſs to flow.
FLU'IDNESS }

FLUIDITY, is when the parts of any body being very fine and ſmall are ſo diſpoſed by motion and figure, that they can eaſily ſlide over one another's ſurfaces, all manner of ways.

FLUIDITY, ſtands in direct oppoſition to firmneſs or ſolidity; and is diſtinguiſhed from liquidity and humidity, in that humidity implies wetting and adhering; thus melted metals, air, æther, and even ſmoak and flame it ſelf are fluid bodies, but not liquid ones, their parts being actually dry, and not leaving any ſenſe of moiſture.

FLUKE, a part of an anchor that pecks into the ground; alſo an inſect.

FLUMINO'SE [fluminoſus, L.] full of rivers.

FLU'MMERY, a wholeſome jelly made of oatmeal.

FLU'OR uterinus [with Phyſicians] the whites in women, L.

FLUOR, a flux, courſe or ſtream, L.

FLUOR albus [in Medicine] the whites in women, L.

FLUOR. [in Phyſicks, &c.] a fluid, or more properly the ſtate of a body; which was before hard and ſolid; but is now by fuſion or fire reduced into a ſtate of fluidity.

FLUORES, women's monthly courſes, L.

FLUORES [with Naturaliſts] ſpars, a ſort of ſtones found in mines and quarries, which at firſt ſight reſemble gems, being of divers colours and ſhapes, L.

To FLURT, to throw out, as ſpittle out of the mouth.

A FLURT [prob. of flore, Du. a fool] a ſorry wench or woman, as a jill-flurt.

FLUSH [probably of fluxus, L flux, F. at flood, &c. or as Meric Cauſabon will, of φλύζω, Gr.] a red colour in the face, &c.

FLUSH of Money [prob. of fluere, L. to flow] to be full of or abound with money.

FLUSH Fore and Aſt [Sea Phraſe] a term uſed of a ſhip, when her decks are laid level from head to ſtern.

FLUSH at Cards, a ſet or hand of cards, of all one ſort, as all diamonds, &c.

FLUSHED, encouraged, put into heart, elated or lifted up with good ſucceſs.

FLU'SHING, a reddening in the face, cauſed by ſome ſudden apprehenſion or tranſport of the mind.

FLU'STERED [Skinner derives it of ꝑluꝑꝺian, Sax. to weave, it being cuſtomary in the ſame ſenſe to ſay his cap is well thrumb'd, others from φλύσσω, Gr. to belch, whence ὀινοφλωξ drunken] ſomewhat diſordered in drink.

A FLUTE [fleute, F.] an inſtrument of wind-muſick; alſo a ſort of ſea-veſſel.

FLUTE de Allemanda, a German flute, Ital.

FLUTE a bec, a common flute, Ital.

FLUTED [with Architects] channelled or wrought in the form of a gutter.

FLUTES } [in Botany] uſed in deſcribing the ſtems
FLUTINGS } and fruits of certain plants, which have furrows analogous to thoſe of columns.

FLUTES [in Architecture] hollows made in the body of a column or pillar.

FLUTES [in Pillars of the Corinthian, Compoſite, Dorick and Ionic Orders] are commonly made all along the body of the pillars, from 20 to 24 flutes in each column, each flute being hollowed in exactly a quarter of a circle.

FLUTES [in the Dorick Order] join together without any interſpace.

FLUTES [in the Compoſite, Corinthian and Ionic columns] have a liſt running between every 2 of them.

To FLU'TTER [ꝑloꝓeꝑan, Sax.] to try to fly as a bird; alſo to fly about.

FLU'TTERING [of ꝑloꝓeꝑan, Sax.] making a quick motion with the wings, in trying to fly, as young birds.

FLUVIA'TICK [fluviaticus, L.] that is in or of the river.

FLUVIA'TILE [fluviatilis, L.] belonging to a river.

FLUVIA'TILIS [with Botanick Writers] growing in or near a river, L.

FLUVIO'SE [fluvioſus, L.] flowing much.

FLUX [fluxus, L. flux, F.] a flowing.

FLUX [in Phyſick] an extraordinary iſſue or evacuation of ſome humour.

FLUX Powders [in Chymiſtry] are certain powders uſed for diſſolving of the harder metals and melting oars, in order to diſcover what proportion of metal they contain.

FLUX and Reflux [of the Tide] the flowing and ebbing of it, occaſioned by the univerſal law of gravitation.

FLUX [in Hydrography] a regular periodical motion of the ſea, happening twice in 24 hours, wherein the water is raiſed, and driven violently againſt the ſhores.

FLUXIBI'LITY } capableneſs of being made to flow,
FLU'XIBLENESS } or rendered fluid.

FLU'XING, a method of curing the venereal diſeaſe by raiſing a ſalivation in the patient.

FLUXION [in Chymiſtry] the running of metals or any other bodies into a fluid, either by fire or otherwiſe.

FLUXION [in Medicine] a flowing of humours or rheum.

FLUXION [in Surgery] that which raiſes a humour all at once, or in a very little time, by the fluidity of the matter.

FLUXIONS [with Mathematicians] is the arithmetick or analyſis of infinitely ſmall, variable quantities; or the method of finding an infiniteſimal or infinitely ſmall quantity, which being taken an infinite number of times, becomes equal to a given quantity.

FLU'XUS, a flux or flowing, L.

FLUXUS Chiloſus [with Phyſicians] a purging, when the meat is thrown out, and does not produce any of that humour called chyle, L.

FLUXUS Hepaticus [with Phyſicians] a flux, in which black ſhining blood, and as it were parch'd, is driven out of the guts through the fundament. It is alſo ſometimes taken for a flux, wherein ſerous ſharp blood is voided.

To FLY [ꝑlean, Sax.] to move to and fro with wings; to move as clouds; to run away haſtily or ſwiftly.

FLYING Worms [in Horſes] a tetter or ring-worm.

To FOAM See FOME.

FOB [probably of ſuppe, Teut.] a ſmall pocket for a watch, &c.

To FOB off, to put off with ſhams, and trifling excuſes or pretences.

FO'CAGE [focarium, L.] hearth money.

FOCA'LE [Old Rec.] fire-wood or fuel.

FOCI'LLE minus [Anat.] the leſſer bone of the arm called radius, or the leſſer bone of the leg called fibula.

FOCILLA'TION, a comforting, cheriſhing or nouriſhing, L.

FOCUS, a fire-hearth, L.

FO'CUS [with Anatomiſts] a certain place in the meſentery and other parts, from whence the original of fevers were derived by the ancients.

FOCUS [in Geometry and Conick Sections] is applied to certain points in the Parabola, Ellipſis and Hyperbola, wherein the rays reflected from all parts of the curve do concur or meet.

FOCI of an Ellipſis [in Geometry] are the 2 navel points of an ellipſis or oval, which ſerve for the drawing of that figure, and from whence if 2 right lines be drawn to any point of the circumference, the ſum of them is equal to the tranſverſe or longer axis.

FOCUS [of a Parabola] is ſo called by Geometricians, as being the point on which the ſun's rays will be united, when reflected from a parabolick curve, ſo as to ſet fire on natural bodies; and thence ſome call it the burning point. It is the point in the Axis within the figure, diſtant from the Vertex, or top, one 4th part of the Perimeter or latus rectum.

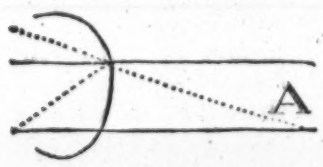
FOCUS of a Glaſs [in Opticks] is the point of converance or concourſe, where the rays meet and croſs the axis after their refraction by the glaſs.



Virtual FOCUS, is the ſame as point of divergence in a concave-glaſs, as the point A in the following figure.

FO'DDER [ꝼoꝺꝺe, Sax.] food for cattle of any kind.

To FO'DDER [ꝼoꝺꝺian, Sax.] to give food, &c. to cattle.

FO'DDER [Civil Law] a prerogative that the king has to be provided of corn, &c. by his ſubjects, for his horſes in any warlike expedition.

FO'THER } of lead containing 8 pigs, every pig weighing 3 ſtone and a half, reckoned at 2600 pound in the book of rates, 22 hundred and a half at the mines, 19 hundred and a half by the London plummers.

FODERTO'RIUM [Old Rec.] proviſion of fodder or forrage, made by cuſtom to the king's ſurveyors.

FODI'NA, a mine or quarry, L.

FODINA [with Anatomiſts] the labyrinth, or leſſer pit in the bone of the ear.

FOE [ꝼah, Sax.] an enemy.

FOECU'NDITY [fœcunditas, L] fruitfulneſs.

FOE'DERAL [fœderalis, L.] belonging to a covenant.

FOE'NERATED [fœneratus, L.] put out to uſury.

FOENERA'TION, uſury, L.

FOE'MINA, a female in beaſts, plants, &c. L.

FOEMINA [with Chymiſts] ſulphur.

FOENI'CULUM, fennel, L.

FOE'NUM, hay, L.

FOENUM Græcum, the herb fenigreek, L.

FOE'SA [Old Records] herbage, graſs.

FOETI'FEROUS [fœtifer, L.] fruitful, or bringing fruit.

FOETIFICA'TION, a bringing forth fruit, L.

FOETI'FICK [fœtificus, L.] making fruitful.

FOETOR, a ſtink or ill ſmell, L.

FOETOR [with Phyſicians] ſtinking or fœtid effluvia proceeding from the body or any parts of it, as a ſtinking breath, proceeding from filthineſs about the teeth and gums.

FOE'TUS, the child while yet contained in the womb of the mother, but particularly after it is perfectly formed, till which time it is properly called embryo; alſo the young of other animals in general; but in the ſame ſtate.

FOG [of ꝼoꝳ, Sax.] a miſt.

FOGS [with Naturaliſts] are ſaid to conſiſt of aqueous particles rarefied; as is plain, in that they mightily bedew every thing that lies open to them. It may be obſerved in a hot day, when there is no wind ſtirring, that ſuch a company of vaponrs riſe out of moiſt ground as make thick fogs, which are ſometimes higher and ſometimes lower, as the multitude and motion of the vapours happens to be. Theſe fogs riſe out of all places mountainous or campain, and continue till they be diſpelled by wind or heat; but they continue longer in loweſt grounds, becauſe thoſe places are fulleſt of moiſture, and are not ſo much expos'd to the winds: but when the wind riſes upon them, wherever they be, they are diſſipated and driven away till we ſee no more of them. So likewiſe the heat of the ſun, putting them into a briſker motion, either diſſipates them by rarefaction, or raiſes them higher, and forms them into clouds.

And whereas ſometimes fogs ſtink, it is not becauſe they come from ſtinking water, but becauſe the vapours are mixt with ſulphureous exhalations which ſmell ſo.

FO'GGINESS [ꝼoᵹᵹicneſſ, Sax.] foggy quality, or being foggy.

FO'GGY [of ꝼoᵹᵹiᵹ, Sax.] miſty, &c.

FO'GAGE } [Foreſt Law] rank graſs not eaten in ſum-
FOGGE } mer.

FOH! [fi! F. vah! L.] an interjection, of diſlike, ſcorn diſdain, &c.

FOI'BLE [foible, F.] a weakneſs of judgment, or blind ſide.

FOIL [of folium, L.] a ſheet of thin tin on the backſide of a looking-glaſs; alſo an ornament or ſet-off for a jewel.

To FOIL [probably of fouler or affoler, F. to ſuppreſs or keep under] to overthrow, &c.

A FOIL, an inſtrument without a point to fence with.

A FOIL [with Wreſtlers] a fall not compleat, nor cleverly given.

FOIL [fouille, F.] an ornament or ſet-off.

FOI'LING [Hunting Term] the footing and treading of deer that is on the graſs and ſcarce viſible.

FOIN, a paſs in fencing.

To FOIN [probably of poindre, F. to prick] to make a paſs in fencing.

FOINS, a kind of fur, black at the top, upon a whitiſh ground, and taken from a little animal like a weeſel, or ferret, called a foine.

To FOIST [probably of fauſſer, F. falſificare, L.] to inſert ſome paſſages into a book that are not genuine.

FOI'STY, muſty, fuſty.

FOLCLAND } [ꝼolc-lanꝺ, sax.] the land of the com-

FO'RTHWITH [ꝼoꝛꝺ-piꝺ, Sax.] preſently, immediately, out of hand.

FO'RTIFIABLE, capable of being fortified.

FORTIFICA'TION [or Military Architecture] is the art of fortifying or ſtrengthening a place, by making works around the ſame, in order to render it capable of being defended by a ſmall force againſt the attacks of a more numerous enemy.

Ancient FORTIFICATION, was walls of defence made of trunks of trees, &c. mix'd with earth to ſecure them againſt the aſſaults of an enemy. Theſe in time were alter'd for walls of ſtone, with little walls or parapets raiſed on the top of the other, behind which they made uſe of their darts in ſecurity, the parapets being cut into loop-holes, and theſe walls are flanked by round or ſquare towers.

Artificial FORTIFICATION, is works raiſed by the engineers, to ſtrengthen the natural ſituation of a place by repairing it and ſupplying its defects; ſuch as ravelins, horn-works, half-moons, redoubts, &c.

Natural FORTIFICATION, conſiſts in a place being ſtrong by nature, as being ſituated on a hill or in a marſh, or any other way, that makes it of difficult acceſs; whether by rivers, marſhes, ſtrong defiles or the like.

Offenſive FORTIFICATION, has regard to the ſeveral ways of annoying an enemy, and is the particular concern of the general of an army, who deſigns to lay ſiege to ſome town; it conſiſts in knowing how to take all advantages in the manner of carrying on a ſiege, &c.

Defenſive FORTIFICATION, has reſpect to the precaution and induſtry by which a weak party oppoſes a ſtronger, and particularly concerns governours of places, who knowing the ſtrength and weakneſs of the place intruſted to them, ought to endeavour to ſecure it from ſurprizes, &c.

Regular FORTIFICATION, is one whoſe baſtions are all equal, or that are built in a regular polygon; the ſides and angles whereof are generally about a muſket-ſhot from each other.

Irregular FORTIFICATION, is when a town has ſuch an irregular form or ſituation, as to render it uncapable of being fortified regularly, either becauſe of the difference of its ſides; ſome being too long, and others too ſhort; or by its being ſurrounded with precipices, valleys, ditches, rivers, hills, rocks or mountains, &c.

FORTIFI'ED [fortifié, F.] made ſtrong, ſtrengthened with fortifications.

Durable FORTIFICATION, is one that is built with a deſign that it ſhall remain a ſtanding ſhelter for ages.

Temporary FORTIFICATION, is one that is erected upon ſome emergent occaſion, and deſigned to laſt only a little time.

To FO'RTIFY [fortificare, L. fortifier, F.] to ſtrengthen or make ſtrong, to fence; to ſecure a place after a regular manner with ramparts, ditches and other bulwarks.

FORTI'LITY [Old Stat.] a fortified place, a caſtle or bulwark.

FO'RTIN, a little fort or ſconce built in haſte for the defence of a poſt or paſs, &c. called a field-fort.

FO'RTINS } are field-forts or ſmall fortreſſes or ſconces,
FO'RLINS } the flanked angles of which are generally diſtant 120 fathom one from another; they are different in their extent and figure according to the nature and ſituation of the ground; ſome of them having whole baſtions, and others only demi-baſtions; the uſe of them is only temporary, and are either to defend the line of circumvallation, or to guard ſome paſſage or dangerous poſt.

FO'RTINGLES, the ſame as a farundel.

FORTI'SSIMO [in Muſick Books] denotes extreme loud, Ital.

FO'RTITUDE [fortitudo, L.] valour, courage or ſtouteneſs of mind; one of the cardinal virtues by which a man acts according to the rules of reaſon, even in the midſt of the greateſt misfortunes or adverſity.

FO'RTITUDES [with Aſtrologers] are certain advantages which planets have to make their influences more ſtrong by being ſo or ſo placed, qualified or affected.

A FO'RTLET [Old Law] a little fort.

FO'RTRESS [forteresſe, F.] a place fortified either by art or nature.

FORTU'ITOUS [fortuitus, L.] happening by chance, caſual, accidental.

FO'RTUITOUSNESS [of fortuitus, L. fortuit, F.] caſualneſs, accidentalneſs.

FO'RTUNA [in Ancient Law Books] the ſame that we call Treaſure-trove.

FO'RTUNATE [fortunatus, L. fortuné, F.] happy, lucky, ſucceſsful.

FO'RTUNATE Iſlands, a place famous among the ancients, on account of golden apples, fancied to grow in them; or, as Varro ſays, for ſheep with golden fleeces. Ancient geographers deſcribe them as ſituate without the ſtraits of Gibraltar in the Atlantick ocean; but the moderns take them to be the Canary iſlands on account of their great temperature and fertility.

FO'RTUNATELY [fortunatè, L.] happily, proſperouſly, ſucceſsfully.

FO'RTUNATENESS [fortunatio, L.] luckineſs, ſucceſsfulneſs, proſperouſneſs.

FO'RTUNE, is fabled to be the daughter of Oceanus, and the ſervant of the gods. They fancied ſhe had in her poſſeſſion and at her diſpoſal the honours, riches and happineſs of life; that ſhe gave them and took them away at her pleaſure: but that ſhe was blind and very unconſtant; that ſhe held a wheel in her hand, that ſhe turned without ceaſing, raiſing men ſometimes to the top of the wheel, and ſometimes caſting them down, ſo that there was nothing ſettled or ſecure, that did concern her; ſhe was univerſally adored, and great princes had her image in gold kept ſafe with them in their dwelling, that ſhe might be always favourable to them.

She was repreſented in a chariot dragged by four blind horſes; under her feet was a globe, and in her right hand ſhe held the helm of a ſhip, and in the left a cornucopia or horn of plenty. She had many images, ſtatues and temples erected to her, and the Romans adored no deity more than Fortuna. At her right hand a youth named favor, play'd upon a wheel, to intimate how ſoon her favours might fly away from us: there were at Rome two images of her that were remarkable, Fortuna calva and Fortuna vitrea, which were both very ſignificant.

She had alſo ſeveral temples erected to her honour. One to Fortuna primigenia, the other to Fortuna maſcula which was near to the temple of Venus and alſo Fortuna muliebris. There was alſo Fortuna privata and Fortuna obſequens, and alſo Fortuna barbata; there were ſeveral other Fortunes, who had temples.

When Fortune was not favourable to them, they were wont to load her with curſes and imprecations.

Fortune was alſo pointed as a naked lady ſtanding upon a globe or ball, having an enſign or ſoil over-ſhadowing her.

Fo'rtunes [with Aſtrologers] the two benevolent planets, Jupiter and Venus, ſo termed on account of their kind and benevolent nature.

Fo'rtuny [Ancient Writings] a kind of tournament or running a tilt on horſeback with lances.

Foru'rth [Ancient Deeds] a long ſlip of ground.

Spring FOUNTAIN, a kind of plain ſpout or ſtream of water, iſſuing out of a ſtone or hole in the wall, without any decoration.

FOU'NTAINS [fontes, L. fontaines, F.] are of 2 ſorts, ſuch as dry up in the winter, and ſuch as flow always. Moſt are of opinion, that the former are produced by the rain. Thoſe perpetual ſprings may be defin'd to be collections of waters running down from the higher to the lower parts of the earth. Out of a great number of ſuch fountains, rivers are gathered which carry the waters into the ſea.

Some have imagined, that the perpetual ones are derived from the ſea, and that there are ſubterraneous tubes in the earth, through which the ſea-water is conveyed to the fountains. But this opinion is liable to theſe two difficulties, how it is poſſible for the ſea-water to be carried to the tops of the higheſt mountains, ſince by all experiments in Hydroſtaticks it appears, that the ſurface of any water contained in any veſſel always lies even, ſo that it is impoſſible for any one part of the ſurface to be higher than another; except it be made ſo by ſome external force. 2. How it comes to paſs that fountain-water is not ſalt.

Others again diſlike this hypotheſis, and that for ſeveral reaſons, and aſſign rain as the cauſe of fountains; but if rain were the only cauſe, whence can it be, that thoſe fountains are never dry in the time of the greateſt drought, when there has been no rain for a long time? and therefore others to rain add vapours; which being by the heat of the ſun exhaled in vaſt quantities (as the learned Mr. Edmund Halley has proved) and they being carried over the low-land by the wind to the ridges of mountains, where they preſently precipitate, and gliding down by the crannies of ſtone, and part of the vapour entering into the caverns of the hills, the water thereof gathers as in an alembick in the baſons of ſtone it finds; which being once filled, all the overplus of water runs over by the loweſt place, and breaking out by the ſides of the hills, forms ſingle ſprings, and many of theſe running down the valleys between the ridges of the hills, and coming to unite, form little rivulets or brooks; and many of theſe meeting again in one common valley, and gaining the plain ground, being grown leſs rapid, become a river; and many of theſe being united in one common channel, make the largeſt rivers, as the Thames, the Rhine, the Danube, &c.

FOUR [quatuor, L. quatre, F.] IV. 4. the figure is called the cube's baſe, a cube or ſquare having a foot or baſe of 4 angles; and the cube among ſolid bodies is accounted the moſt excellent and perfect, repreſenting firmneſs, continuance and virtue. The figure in its parts makes up 10, being conſidered two times and a half, and alſo in this manner, 1, 2, 3, 4, make 10. It is the number of letters in the Hebrew name יהוה, and thence by divines called Tetragrammaton, or name of 4 letters; and many other nations have given to God a name of 4 letters, as the Aſſyrians Adad, the Egyptians Amun, the Perſians Syre, the Greek Θεὸς, the Latins Deus, and thence the French Dieu.

FOUR Corners [with Horſemen] to work a horſe upon 4 corners, is in imagination to divide the volt or round into 4 quarters; and when he has done ſo upon each of theſe quarters the horſe makes a round or two at trot or gallop, and when he has done ſo upon each quarter, he is ſaid to have made the four quarters.

FOURCH [in Law] a delay or putting off or prolonging an action.

FOURCHEE' [in Heraldry] as a Croſs Fourchée, is one that is forked at the ends, that has its forks compos'd of ſtrait lines, and blunt ends, as if cut off, as in the figure, F.

FOURI'ER, an under-harbinger or meſſenger.

FOU'RNEAU, a powder-chamber, or chamber of a mine; a hole or cavity made under a work. The top of which is ſometimes cut into ſeveral points like chimneys, to make more paſſages for the powder, that it may have its effects on ſeveral ſides at the ſame time, F.

FOUT-GELD, an amercement for not cutting out the balls of great dogs feets in the foreſt.

FOWL [ƒuȝel, Sax. Fugl, Dan.] a bird.

To FOWL [ƒuȝelan, Sax.] to go a fowling.

FOW'LER [ƒuȝeleꝛ, Sax.] a bird-catcher, &c.

A FOWLER, a piece of artillery ſo called.

FOX [ƒox, Sax. Fuchs, Dan.] a crafty animal; a beaſt of chace.

A FOX [Emblematically] may very properly denote a prudent commander, who, to gain victories with leſs expence of blood, rather chooſes to prevail in his enterprizes by conduct and ſtratagem, than by downright dint of the ſoldier's courage.

A FOX [Hieroglyphically] was uſed to repreſent a ſubtil fellow, full of wicked intentions; becauſe that animal is notable on account of its craftineſs.

A FOX [in Coat Armour] may repreſent thoſe, that have done ſignal ſervice to their prince and country by the adminiſtration of juſtice; or upon embaſſies or ſuch like negotiations, where wit and dexterity is of more uſe than ſtrength or valour.

GARTER, the moſt Noble Order of the Garter was inſtituted in the Year 1350, by King Edward the III, as ſome ſay, on Account of his many ſignal Victories, particularly one, wherein it is ſaid the King's Garter was uſed for the Token. But others ſay on the following Account, that the King dancing one Night with his Queen and other Ladies, took up a Garter which one of them had dropt; whereat ſome of the Lord's Preſent ſmiling, the King ſaid, that he would make that Garter of high Reputation; and ſoon after erected the Order of the Blue Garter, with this Motto, Honi ſoit qui mal y penſe, i. e. Evil to him that Evil thinks. The latter of theſe Motives is moſt generally believed to have been the Ground of the Inſtitution of this Order of Knighthood. However, both theſe Motives might concur to the ſame End; and it has ever ſince been eſteemed a great Addition of Honour beſtow'd on the nobleſt Perſon of the Engliſh Nation, and many foreign Princes have thought themſelves honoured in being admitted into it. The Number of the Knights is 26, including the King, and that is one Thing that enhances the Value of it, that never any more are admitted, whereas all or moſt other Orders have been ſo freely beſtow'd, that they have loſt much of their Eſteem by it. The famous Warrior St. George of Cappadocia, is made the Patron of this Order; and every Knight of it is to wear as his Badge, the Image of St. George on Horſe-back, trampling on a Dragon, with his Spear ready to pierce him, the whole garniſhed with precious Stones appendant to a blue Ribbon about their Necks; becauſe that Saint is ſaid to have ſlain ſuch a Monſter, that in his Days ravaged the Country.

They are alſo obliged to wear a Garter on the left Leg, ſet with Pearls and precious Stones, having this Motto, Honi ſoit qui mal y penſe, i. e. Shame to him that Evil thinks; without which two Ornaments they are never to appear Abroad; and alſo King Charles the Iſt ordained, that every Knight ſhould always wear a Star of Silver, embroidered on his Cloak or Coat, with the Eſcutcheon of St. George within the Garter, in the Centre of it. See St. George.

To Geld [gælder, Dan.] to cut out the Stones of a Male Animal.

Ge'ldable [of ȝilban, Sax. to pay] liable to pay Taxes.

Geldable [of gælder, Dan.] capable of being gelded.

Ge'lded [ȝylte, Sax. or gælder, Dan.] having the Testicles or Stones cut out.

Ge'lding [of ȝylte, Sax. or gælder, Dan.] a gelded Horse.

Ge'lder Rose, a Flower.

Ge'lly [of gelando, L. gelée, F.] the Liquor of Meat boil'd to a thick Consistence.

Gelse'minum [with Botanists] Jessamin.

Ge'loscopy [of γέλως, Laughter, and σκοπέω, Gr. to view or consider] a sort of Divination performed by means of Laughter; or a divining any Persons, Qualities or Character, by observation of the manner of his Laughing.

Gem [gemma, L.] a Jewel.

Ge'mara, the second Part of the Babylonish Talmud of the Jews.

Gema'tria [גמטריא, Heb.] the first kind of Arithmetical Cabala, in use among the Cabalistical Jews.

Gemelli'parous [gemellipara, L.] bearing Twins.

Ge'melles [Heral.] the bearing Barrs by Pairs or Couples in a Coat of Arms.

Geme'llus [with Anatomists] a Muscle of the Elbow, so called from its double rise, viz. from the upper Part of the Shoulder Blade inwardly, and from the upper back Part of the Shoulder Bone.

To Ge'minate [geminare, L.] to double.

Ge'mini, Twins, two Children or Young born at one Birth, L.

Gemini [with Anat.] a Pair of Muscles serving to move the Thigh outward.

Gemini [with Astrol.] one of the twelve Signs of the Zodiack.

Gemini [with Astronomers] Twins, one of the Signs of the Zodiack, Castor and Pollux, the Sons of Jupiter and Leda. These are call'd Dioscuri, for they were born and brought up in the Land of Laconia, where they chiefly shew'd themselves, and outdid all Men in brotherly Love. For they neither contended for Command nor any thing else. Jupiter therefore, that he might make the Memory of their Unanimity immortal, called them Gemini, i. e. Twins, and assign'd them the same Place among the Stars.

Ge'minous Arteries [Anatomy] two small Arteries passing down the Joint of the Knee, between the Processes of the Thigh-Bone.

Gemi'tes, a precious Stone in which one may see two white Hands holding together.

To Gemm [of gemma, L.] to put forth Buds.

Ge'mma [with Botanists] the turgid Bud of any Tree, when it is beginning to bear, L.

Gemma, a Jewel, L.

Ge'mma Sal, a sort of common Salt which is taken out of Pits and shines like Crystal, L.

Ge'mmary [of gemma] a Jewel-House.

Gemina'tus, a, um [in Baton. Writ.] divided into two by a Partition, as the Seed-pods of Tragacantha, Goat's-Beard, &c.

Gemmi'ferous [of gemmifer, L.] producing Gems or Jewels.

Gemmo'sity [gemmositas, L.] abundance of Pearls.

Ge'mmow Ring [of geminus, L. double] a double Ring in Links.

Gemo'niæ Scalæ, a Place in Rome, to which the Bodies of Malefactors that were executed, were dragged and thrown down. It was in the Aventine, near the Temple of Juno Argiva.

Ge'mote [ȝemoꝺ, Sax.] a Court holden on any occasion.

Ge'na Mala [with Anatomists] the Part of the Face from the Nose to the Ears; also the Chin and the Jaw-bone, either upper or under, L.

Genda'rmerie, the Cavalry of the Houshold to the French King.

Genda'rmes, Horsemen who formerly served in compleat Arms, now a particular Body of Cavalry in France.

Ge'nder of Nouns [among Grammarians] is founded on the difference of two Sexes Male and Female, and they are call'd from the Latins Masculine and Feminine, and few Languages have any more Genders but these two; but the Greeks and Latins have another Gender, which the Latins call Neuter, that is as much as to say Neither (masculine or feminine) as Homo a Man, is masculine, and Mulier a Woman, is feminine, and Saxum a Stone, is neuter.

This Gender is in Latin distinguished by the Articles hic, hæc and hoc; but it is a difficult Thing to distinguish the Gender in the English Tongue; and there is scarce any Language in the World, but the English Tongue, that does not admit of a difference of Gender in its Articles and Nouns; all the Distinctions that it has consists in the Pronouns, he, she, &c. The Adjectives of either Gender in the English Tongue have no difference in their Termination. As for Instance, as the Adjectives good and white have no difference in the Termination, whereas the Latins, have bonus, bona, bonum, and the French have bon masculine, and belle feminine for good, and the Latins have albus, alba, album for white, and the French blanc and blanche.

Gender [with Geometricians] geometrical Lines are distinguish'd into Genders, Classes or Orders, according to the Number of the Dimensions of an Equation. expressing the relation between the Ordinates and the Abscissæ.

Genea'logist [genealogus, L. of γενεαλόγος, Gr.] one skilled in describing Pedigrees.

Genealo'gical [genealogicus, L. γενεαλογικὸς, Gr.] of or pertaining to Genealogies or Pedigrees.

Genea'logy [genealogia, L. of γενεαλογία of γένος, a Descent, and λόγος, a Word or Discourse] a series or succession of Ancestors or Progenitors; also a summary Account of the Relations and Alliances of a Person or Family, both in the direct or collateral Lines.

Ge'nearch [genearcha, L. γενεάρχος, Gr.] the chief of a Stock or Family.

Ge'nerable [generabilis, L.] that may be engendered or begotten.

Ge'nerableness, capableness of being generated.

Ge'neral [generalis, L.] pertaining to all kinds, common, that extends to a whole Genus.

A General, the chief Commander of an Army; also the principal Governour of a religious Order among the Catholicks.

A General [in Military Affairs] a particular Beat of Drum early in the Morning, to give notice for the Foot to be in readiness to March.

General Synod, a Council held in which Bishops, Priests, &c. of all Nations are assembled together.

Genera'le, the single Commons, or the ordinary or usual Provision of the Religious in Convents.

Genera'lity [generalitas, L. generalité, F.] the whole or greatest Part.

Ge'neralness, the generality, or being general.

Ge'nerant [generans, L.] begetting, a generating, begetting or bringing forth.

To Ge'nerate [generare, L.] to beget or produce.

Ge'nerated Quantity } [with Mathemat.] whatsoever
Ge'nited Quantity } is produced in Arithmetick, either by the Multiplication, Division, Extraction of Roots; or in Geometry, by the Invention or finding out the Contents, Area, and Sides; or of extreme and mean Proportionals, without Arithmetical Addition and Subtraction.

GE'NERATING Line } [in Geometry] is that which by GE'NERATING Figure } its Motion or Revolutions produces any other Figure plain or ſolid.

GENERA'TION [in Phyſicks] is the Act of procreating or producing a Thing, which before was not in being.

GENERA'TION [with Schoolmen] a total change or converſion of a Body into a new one, which contains no ſenſible Part or Mark of its former State.

GENERATION, Lineage, Race or Deſcent, L.

GENERATION [with Philoſophers] is defined to be a real Action, whereby a living Creature begets another like it of the ſame kind.

GE'NERATIVE, ſerving to generate, beget or produce.

GENERA'TIVENESS [of generatif, F. generativus, L.] generative or begetting Quality or Faculty.

GENE'RICAL [genericus, L.] of or pertaining to a Genus or Kind.

GENERO'SA [Law Term] a Gentlewoman, ſo that if a Gentlewoman be termed Spinſter in any original Writ, Appeal or Indictment, ſhe may abate and quaſh the ſame, L.

GE'NEROUS [generoſus, L.] noble, free, bountiful.

GENERO'SITY } [generoſitas, L. generoſité, F.] generous Diſpoſition, Bountifulneſs.
GE'NEROUSNESS }

GE'NESIS [γένεσις, Gr.] the firſt of the five Books of Moſes, ſo called by the Greeks, on account of its beginning with the Hiſtory of the Generation or Production of all Things.

GENESIS, Generation, Original, Riſe.

GE'NESIS [with Geometricians] the forming of any plain or ſolid Figure by the Motion of ſome Line or Surface is call'd the Deſcribent, and that according to which the Motion is made is call'd the Dirigent. Thus a right Line moved Parallel to its ſelf, is ſaid to generate a Parallelogram, and a Parallelogram turned about one of its Sides as an Axis, generates a Cylinder.

GE'NET, a ſmall fiz'd, well proportioned Spaniſh Horſe.

GENET [with Horſemen] a Turkiſh Bit, the Curb of which is all of one Piece, and made like a large Ring, and made above the Liberty of the Tongue.

To ride with the Legs a Genette, i. e. in the Genet or Spaniſh Faſhion, that is, ſo ſhort that the Spurs bear upon the Horſe's Flank.

GENET, a little Creature, whoſe fine Furr is called by that Name.

GENETHLI'ACAL [γενεθλιακὸς, Gr.] of or pertaining to Caſters of Nativities, Aſtrologers, Fortune-Tellers; alſo to Books which treat of the Calculation of Nativities.

GENETHLI'ACI [γενεθλιακοὶ, Gr.] Aſtrologers, Perſons who erect Horoſcopes, or pretend to tell Perſons what ſhall befal Men, by means of the Planet which preſided at their Nativity, L.

GENETHLI'ACUM Carmen, a Poem or Compoſition in Verſe upon the Birth of a Prince or other illuſtrious Perſon, in which the Poet, by a kind of Prediction, promiſes him Honours, Succeſſes, &c.

GENE'THLIALOGY [genethlialogia, L. γενεθλιαλογία, Gr.] a caſting of Nativities.

GENE'VA [genevre, F.] a diſtill'd Water produc'd from the Berries of the Juniper Tree.

GE'NIAL [genialis, L.] Feſtival, Joyful, Merry; alſo pertaining to Marriage; alſo a term apply'd by the Antients to certain Deities, who (as they imagined) preſided over the Affairs of Generation.

GENIA'LES Dii, the four Elements, the twelve Signs, and the Sun and Moon, ſo call'd by the Antients.

GENIA'LITY } feſtivalneſs, merrineſs at Meat.
GE'NIALNESS }

GENICULA'TION, a bowing of the Knee, L.

GENICULA'TUS, a, um [in Botan. Writ.] jointed, L.

GENI'CULUM [with Botaniſts] the Joint or Knot in the Stalk of a Plant; hence thoſe Plants which have Knots or Joints are called geniculate Plants. And hence Geniculo with a Joint, Geniculis with Joints, L.

GE'NICULO [in Botan. Writ.] ſignifies with a Knot, &c. and geniculis with Knots, &c. L.

GE'NII [of gignendo or generando, begetting, i. e. ſuggeſting unto us Thoughts] the Heathens imagined that every Perſon was Born with two Genii, proper to him or her; theſe were alſo named Dæmones; the one was good and favourable, and perſuaded to Honeſty and Virtue, and in Recompence of it procured to him all manner of good Things proper to his Eſtate; and the other was the Evil Genius, who was the Cauſe of all Wickedneſs and Miſhap. That theſe Genii were born and dy'd with them; that they were of a middle Nature between Gods and Men; that they partook of Immortality from the one, and Paſſions from the other; and having Bodies fram'd of an aerial Matter, inhabited the vaſt Region of the Air, and acted as Mediators between God and Men, and were the Interpreters and Agents of the Gods, communicated the Wills of the Gods to Men, and carried the Prayers and Vows of Men to them; they believed that the good Genii rejoic'd at the good, and were afflicted at the ill Fortune of their Wards; that the evil Genii took a pleaſure in perſecuting Men and bringing them evil Tidings, which laſt were called Larvæ and Lemures. That they very rarely appear'd to Men, and wherever the former did it was in favour of ſome extraordinary Virtue, &c.

And they alſo imagined, that Kingdoms, Cities and Places had their peculiar Genius's. The Genius of the Roman State was painted with a Cornucopia in one Hand, and a Diſh full in the other, which was ſtretched forth on an Altar. The Heathens thought the Genii to be of a middle Nature between God and Man, and therefore imagined them to be the Sons of Jupiter and Terra.

They reckoned alſo all the Stars into the Number of the Genii, and therefore worſhipped them, as the Jews did, in the Quality of Angels. They painted them in a different manner; ſometimes as a Serpent, ſometimes as Boys and Girls, or as old Men, but always with a Garland of Palm-Tree on their Heads, whence this Tree was call'd Arbor Genialis.

In ſome antient Medals, the Genius of the Emperor of Rome, was painted as a Man with a large Diſh of all ſorts of Flowers in one Hand, and a Scourge in the other, to expreſs both Rewards and Puniſhments.

They eſteemed it unlawful to kill any Creature to their Genius on their Birth-day, becauſe they thought it undecent to take away Lives of Creatures on the ſame Day that they received their own.

The uſual Offerings to the Genii were Wine and Flowers. As Men had their Genii, the Women had their Junones, Goddeſſes, that they imagined watch'd over and protected them.

GE'NIOGLOSSI [in Anatomy] a pair of Muſcles proceeding inwardly from the Fore-part of the lower Jaw, under another call'd Geniohyoides, and which, enlarging themſelves, are faſtened into the Baſis of the Tongue.

GE'NIOHYOIDÆUS [Anat.] a Muſcle of the Hyoides, which with its Partner, ariſing from the internal Parts of the lower Jaw Bone, are inſerted into the ſuperior Part of the Fore-Bone of the Os Hyoides.

GENIO'GRAPHY, conſiders or treats of the Nature of Angels and Intelligences.

GE'NITAL [genitalis, L.] generative, begetting.

GENITAL Bodies, the beginning of all things, the Elements.

GENITAL [in Medicine] ſomething relating to generals.

GENI'TALS } [genitalia, L.] the Privy Parts of a
GENITO'RES } Male; viz. the ſpermatick Veſſels, the Teſtes, and the Penis.

GENI'TES } ſuch Perſons among the Jews, who de-
GENI'TRI } ſcended from Abraham, without any mixture of foreign Blood; or ſuch who iſſued from Parents, who, during the Babyloniſh Captivity, had not married with any gentile Family.

GE'NITIN [q. Junetin of June] a kind of Apple that is the earlieſt Ripe of any others.

GE'NITIVE Caſe [in Grammar.] one of the ſix Caſes of Nouns, by which Property or Poſſeſſion is chiefly imply'd, as Filii, of a Son, from Filius, L. a Son.

GENITU'RA, a Name by ſome given to the Semen, both of the Male and the Female.

GE'NIUS [among the Antients] was uſed to ſignify a Spirit either good or evil; which they ſuppoſed did attend upon every Perſon; they alſo allow'd Genii to each Province, Country, Town, &c. alſo a Man's natural Diſpoſition, Inclination, &c.

GE'NIUS, the Force or Faculty of the Soul, conſidered as it thinks or judges; alſo a natural Talent or Diſpoſition to one thing more than to another.

GE'NNET, an Animal not much unlike a Cat, as well for bigneſs as ſhape; but the Noſe or Snout is long and ſlender like a Weeſel; it is extraordinary light and ſwift, and the Skin as fine and ſoft as Down. There are two ſorts of them, the moſt common is grey, mottled or full of black Spots, the other as black as Jet, and as gloſſy as the fineſt Velvet; but ſpeckled with red, and their Smell is much like that of a Civet-Cat.

GENT [Abbrev. of Gentel] in a good garb, fine, ſpruce, neat.

GE'NTNESS [of gentilis, L.] neatneſs, ſpruceneſs, fineneſs in Dreſs.

GE'NTEEL [of gentilis, L.] having the Air, Behaviour or Carriage of a Gentleman; alſo handſomly dreſſed, neat, gallant.

GENTE'ELNESS [of gentilitas, L. gentiliſſe, F.] genteel Carriage; alſo genteel Dreſs.

GE'NTIL, a ſort of Maggot or Worm that is a Bait to fiſh with.

The GE'NTILES [gentes, L. Nations] among the Jews all were called Gentiles, who were not of the twelves Tribes; but now thoſe are called Gentiles by the Chriſtians, who do not profeſs the Chriſtian Faith.

GENTILES [with Grammarians] Nouns which betoken a Perſon's being ſuch a Country.

GE'NTILISM, Heatheniſm, i. e. the Opinions or Practiſes of Heathens.

GENTILI'TIOUS [gentilitius, L.] pertaining to a Stock, Kindred or Anceſtors.

GENTI'LITY [gentilhommerie, F. of gentilis, L.] the Quality of a Gentleman.

GE'NTLE [gentil, F. of gentilis, L.] meek, mild, tame, moderate, civil, obliging.

GE'NTLENESS, meekneſs, mildneſs, tameneſs, civility, &c.

GE'NTLY, ſoftly, mildly, tamely, meekly, tenderly.

GE'NTLEMAN [gentilhomme, F. generoſus, L.] is properly, according to the antient Notion, one of perfect Blood, who had four Deſcents of Gentility both by his Father and Mother, viz. whoſe Father's Grandfather, his great Grandfather, his Grandfather, and his Father on both Sides were all Gentlemen.

Gentlemen have their beginning either from Blood, as before, as they are born of Parents of Worth; or for having done ſomething in Peace or War, for which they are worthy to bear Arms, and be accounted Gentlemen.

Formerly ſuch Gentlemen had many Privileges, as firſt, that if one Gentleman detracted from another, Combat was allow'd; but if a Peaſant or mean Perſon did ſo, he had a Remedy in Law.

2. In Crimes of an equal Nature a Gentleman was puniſhed more favourably than a Peaſant, &c.

3. Gentlemen might expect a peculiar Honour and Reſpect to be paid them by mean Perſons.

4. The Evidence of a Gentleman was accounted more authentick than that of a Peaſant.

5. In chuſing of Magiſtrates, &c. the Vote of a Gentleman was preferr'd before that of an ignoble Perſon.

6. A Gentleman was to be excuſed from Services, Impoſitions and Duties,

7. A Gentleman condemned to Death, was not to be hanged but beheaded; nor was his Examination to be taken with Torture.

8. It was a puniſhable Crime to take down the Coat Armour of a Gentleman, to deface his Monument, or to offer Violence to the Enſign of any noble Perſon deceaſed.

9. A Gentleman was not to accept a Challenge from a Peaſant; becauſe there was not a Parity in their Conditions.

The antient Saxons admitted none to the Degree of Gentlemen that liv'd by Trades or buying or ſelling; except Merchants and thoſe that follow'd Husbandry; which was always eſteem'd a creditable Way of Livelihood, and preferable to trading to Sea.

The Reaſon why thoſe that are Students in the Inns of Court are eſteem'd Gentlemen is, becauſe antiently none but the Sons of Gentlemen were admitted into them.

But the Students of Law, Grooms of his Majeſty's Palace, Sons of Peaſants made Prieſts or Canons; or thoſe that have receiv'd Dignity in the Schools, or borne Offices in the City, tho' they are ſtiled Gentlemen, yet they have no Right to Coat Armour.

If a Man be a Gentleman by Office only, and loſes that Office, then he alſo loſes his Gentility.

In our Days all are accounted Gentlemen that have Money, and if he has no Coats of Arms, the King of Arms can ſell him one.

GE'NTLEMANLY } like a Gentleman, after the manner
GE'NTLEMANLIKE } of a Gentleman.

GE'NTLEMEN of the Chapel, Officers in Number thirty two, whoſe Duty and Attendence is in the Royal Chapel; of which twelve are Prieſts, and the other twelve are call'd Clerks of the Chapel, who aſſiſt in the performance of Divine Service.

GE'NTLEMANRY } [of gentilitas, q. d. bona gente, L.
GE'NTLEMANSHIP } Man, Sax. and skip of ſcip, Sax. termination] the Dignity of a Gentleman.

GE'NTLEWOMANSHIP, the Dignity of a Gentlewoman.

GE'NTRY [gentilhommerie, F. of gens, L.] the loweſt Degree of Nobleneſs, ſuch as have deſcended of antient Families, and always borne a Coat of Arms.

GENUFLE'XION, a bending of the Knee, or kneeling down.

GE'NUIN Teeth, the Dentes Sapientiæ; which ſee.

GE'NUINNESS [of genuinus, L. and neȝȝe, Sax.] naturalneſs, trueneſs, realneſs, as to what it is ſaid or taken to be, or appears to be.

GE'NUS, Kindred, Stock or Lineage; alſo manner, ſort, faſhion.

GENUS [with Grammarians] ſignifies the kind of the Noun, Maſculine, Feminine or Neuter.

GENUS [among Logicians] is the firſt of the univerſal Ideas. And is when the Idea is ſo common, that it extends to other Ideas, which are alſo univerſal, as the Quadrilater is Genus with reſpect to the Parallelogram and Trapezia; Subſtance is Genus with Reſpect to Subſtance extended, which is called Body, and the Subſtance which thinks, which is called Mind.

GENUS Summum [with Logicians] is that which holds the uppermoſt claſs in its predicament; or it is that which may be divided into ſeveral Species, each whereof is a Genus in reſpect to other Species placed below, L.

Subaltern GENUS [with Logicians] is that, which being a Medium between the higheſt Genus and the loweſt Species, is ſometimes conſidered as a Genus and ſometimes as a Species, L.

GENUS Remotum [with Logicians] is where there is another Genus between it and its Species, L.

GENUS Proximum [in Logick] the next or neareſt Genus, is where the Species is immediately under it, as Man under Animal, L.

GENUS [in Botany] is a Syſtem or Aſſemblage of Plants agreeing in ſome one common Character, in reſpect to the Structure of certain Parts, whereby they are diſtinguiſh'd from all other Plants.

GENUS [in Muſick] a certain manner of ſub-dividing the Principles of Melody, i. e. the conſonant Intervals into their concinnous Parts.

GENUS [with Rhetoricians] is diſtributed into demonſtrative, deliberative and judiciary.

GENUS [in Algebra] this Art by the Antients was diſtributed into two Genera Logiſtick and Specious.

GENUS [with Anatom.] an Aſſemblage or Syſtem of ſimilar Parts, diſtributed throughout the Body, as the Genus Nervoſum, the Nerves ſo conſidered.

GEOCE'NTRICK [of γῆ, the Earth, and κέντρον, Gr. a Centre] the Earth being ſuppoſed to be the Centre.

GEOCENTRICK [with Aſtronomers] is apply'd to a Planet or its Orbit, to denote its being concentrick with the Earth, or as having the Earth for its Centre.

GEOCENTRICK Latitude of a Planet [Aſtron.] is the Latitude of the Planet beheld from the Earth; or the Inclination of a Line connecting the Planet and the Earth to the Plane of the Earth or true Ecliptick.

GEOCENTRICK Place of a Planet [Aſtron.] is the Place in which it appears to us from the Earth; ſuppoſing the Eye fixed there; or it is a Point in the Ecliptick to which a Planet ſeen from the Earth is referred.

GEOCE'NTRICALLY, according to that Syſtem of the World, that ſuppoſes the Earth to be the Centre of the Univerſe.

GEODÆ'SIA [γεωδαισία of γῆ and δαίω, Gr. to know] the Art of meaſuring and ſurveying of Land or Surfaces, and finding the Contents of all plain Figures.

GEODÆ'TICAL, pertaining to Surveying.

GEODÆTICAL Numbers, ſuch as are conſidered according to the vulgar Names or Denominations; by which Money, Weights, Meaſures, &c. are generally known or particularly divided by the Laws or Cuſtoms of ſeveral Nations.

GEODÆ'TICALLY, by way of Survey of the Earth.

GEO'GRAPHER [γεωγράφος, Gr.] a Perſon skill'd in Geography.

GEOGRA'PHICAL } [γεωγραφικὸς, Gr.] of or pertaining to GEOGRA'PHICK } Geography.

GEOGRAPHICAL Mile, is the 60th Part of a Degree of a great Circle, the ſame as a Sea Mile.

GEOGRA'PHICALLY, according to the Art of Geography.

GEO'GRAPHY [γεωγραφία of γῆ, the Earth, and γράφω, Gr. to deſcribe] the Doctrine or Knowledge of the Earth as to its ſelf, and as to its affections; or it is a Deſcription of the whole Globe of the Earth or known habitable World; together with all Parts, Limits, Situations, and other remarkables pertaining to it.

GE'OMANCER [γεωμάντις, Gr.] a Pretender to skill in Geomancy.

GE'O-

GE'OMANCY [γεωμαντεία of γῆ and μαντεία, Gr. Divination] a kind of Divination performed by a Number of little Points or Dots made on Paper at random; and conſidering the various Figures and Lines, which thoſe Points preſent, and thence forming a Judgment of Futurity, and deciding any Queſtion propoſed.

GEOMA'NTICALLY, according to the Science of Geomancy.

GEOME'TRICAL } [geometricus, L. of γεωμετρικὸς, Gr.]
GEOME'TRICK } of or pertaining to Geometry.

GEOME'TRICALLY [of geometrice, L. geometriquement, F. γεωμετρικῶς, Gr.] according to the geometrical Art.

GEOMETRI'CIAN [γεωμέτρης, Gr.] one ſkill'd in the Science of Geometry.

GEOMETRICAL Place, is a certain Bound or Extent, wherein any Point may ſerve for the Solution of a local or undetermined Problem.

GEOMETRICAL Line, is that wherein the relation of the Abſciſſæ to the Semi-ordinates may be expreſſed by an Algebraick Equation.

GEOMETRICAL Proportion, is a Similitude or Identity of Ratio's, as 8, 4, 30 and 15 are in geometrical Proportion.

GEOMETRICAL Progreſſion, a Series of Quantities in continned geometrical Proportion, i. e. increaſing in the ſame Ratio, as 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32 and ſo on.

GEOMETRICAL Place, a Line whereby an indeterminate Problem is conſtructed.

GEOMETRICAL Conſtruction of an Equation, is the contriving and drawing Lines and Figures, whereby to demonſtrate the Equation, Theorem or Canon to be geometrically true.

GEOMETRICAL Solution of a Problem, is when the Problem is ſolved according to the Rules of Geometry; and by ſuch Lines as are truly geometrical or agreeable to the Nature of the Problem.

GEO'METRY [γεωμετρία of γῆ, the Earth, and μετρέω, Gr. to meaſure] Geometry originally ſignified the Art of Meaſuring the Earth, or any Diſtances or Dimenſions on or within it; but it is now uſed for the Science of Quantity, Extenſion or Magnitude abſtractedly conſidered, without any regard to Matter.

It it very probable, that it had its firſt Riſe in Egypt, where the River Nile, every Year overflowing the Country, and leaving it covered with Mud, laid Men under a Neceſſity to diſtinguiſh their Lands one from another by the Conſideration of their Figure; and to be able alſo to meaſure the Quantity of it, ſo that each Man after the fall of the Waters might have his Portion of Ground allotted and laid out to him. After which, it is very likely, a farther Contemplation of thoſe Draughts and Figures help'd them to diſcover many excellent and wonderful Properties belonging to them, which Speculation continually was improving and ſtill is to this Day.

Out of Egypt Thales brought it into Greece, and there it received its chiefeſt Perfection. For the Geometry of the Antients was contained within narrow Bounds, and extended only to right Lines and Curves of the firſt Kind or Order; whereas new Lines of infinite Orders are receiv'd into Geometry, which Orders are defined by Equations, involving the Ordinates and Abſciſſes of Curves.

The Subject of Geometry is the Length, Breadth and Height of all Things. It is divided into Speculative and Practical. The former treats of the Properties of Lines and Figures, ſuch as Euclid's Elements, Apollonius's Conicks, &c. and the latter ſhews how to apply theſe Speculations to uſe in Life.

Geometry may alſo be divided into theſe three ſubordinate Parts. Altimetry, which is the Art of meaſuring ſtrait Lines. Planimetry, or the Art of meaſuring of Surfaces. Stereometry, the Art of meaſuring Solids or Bodies.

Geometry is painted as a Lady with a ſallow Face, clad in a green Mantle fringed with Silver, and holding a ſilver Wand in her right Hand.

GEOMETRY, is the Science or Doctrine of Extention or extended Things, viz. Lines, Surfaces and Solids, which diſcovers the magnitudes or greatneſs of Things preciſely, with their Capacities, &c.

Theoretical GEOMETRY } is a Science which treats of Speculative GEOMETRY } Magnitude or continued Quantity, with its Properties conſidered abſtractedly, without any relation to material Beings; it contemplates the Property of Continuity, and demonſtrates the truth of general Propoſitions, call'd Theorems.

Practical GEOMETRY, is the Method of applying Speculative to Practice; as the meaſuring of Land or ſolid Bodies, Navigation, Fortification, Dialling.

Elementary GEOMETRY, is that which is employ'd in the Conſideration of right Lines, and plain Surfaces and Solids generated from them.

Sublimer GEOMETRY, is employ'd in the Conſideration of curve Lines, conick Sections, and Bodies form'd from them.

GEOPO'NICAL [γεωπονικὸς of γῆ and πόνος, Labour] of or pertaining to the Tilling or Manuring of Land.

GEORGE [of γεωργὸς, Gr. an Husbandman] a proper Name of Men; the moſt noted of that Name was George of Cappadocia, a Tribune or Colonel under the Emperor Dioclefian, who is ſaid to have kill'd a huge Serpent in Africa, to whom a Virgin was expos'd to be devoured. This Champion by ſome is taken for our St. George, the Patron Saint of England, of whoſe Chivalry and Exploits ſo many romantick Stories are told.

St. GEO'RGE, the Patron of England, ſome ſay, was a famous Warrior of Cappadocia, who after he had exercis'd his Valour in the Wars, laid down his Life for the Chriſtian Faith, on which Account he was honoured of all the Chriſtian World, and many Churches were erected in Honour of him, and he became at length to be the Patron Saint of England. This St. George, according to the Legend, did many brave Exploits in his Life-time, and after his Death is ſaid to have appeared ſeveral Times in the Wars undertaken againſt the Infidels in the Holy Land, and to have Fought on the Side of the Chriſtians. And the Devotion of Juſtinian, introduc'd him into the Calendar; and that of Robert de Oily, built him a Church in the Caſtle at Oxford; and King Edward III. built him a Chapel at Windſor. However, Gelaſius, Biſhop of Rome, condemn'd the Legend of St. George as heretical and ridiculous; and the Synod of Ariminum declared the Sufferings of George Apocryphal, in that it was ſet forth by Hereticks.

Neither the Time or Place of his Martyrdom are agreed on by Writers. Venerable Bede ſays, that the 9th of the Calends of May or 23d of April was the Birth Day of George the Martyr, who was eminent for Miracles, and ſuffered under Dacianus, a Potent King of Perſia, that reigned over ſeventy Kings; but no ſuch a Perſon as this Dacianus is to be found in Hiſtory. But Bede adds, that his Sufferings are reckoned among the Apocryphal Writings.

As for the Arian Martyr, the Perſecutor of St. Athanaſius, and Uſurper of the Alexandrian See, Pope Zachary built a Church for him, and plac'd the Head of George there, tho' the Body had been intirely burnt to Aſhes 400 Years before. And it ſeems as if this eminent Martyr was not known in the World till 300 Years after his Death. William of Malmſbury makes the Place of his Martyrdom at Rama, if (as he ſays) we may give Credit to Fame; and William of Tyre ſays, he found a Reſting-Place at Lydda, ſo that nothing of certainty is to be come at concerning this renowned Saint; and eſpecially his Story of killing the Dragon, which ſome underſtand allegorically, to mean Fighting againſt the Dragon of Hereſy, &c. And indeed this Allegory of Fighting with and killing the Dragon hath been taken up by other Nations, which had no particular Relation to any George, as the Order of the Dragon, inſtituted by the Emperor Sigiſmund, among the Hungarians, on Account of his Succeſſes in Battles againſt the Turks, the Dragons of Schiſm and Hereſy that devoured Religion. And ſince we cannot find our Patron St. George, I ſhall conclude the Enquiry with the following Lines:

St. George to ſave a Maid the Dragon ſlew,
A pretty Tale, if all that's told be true?
Some ſay there are no Dragons, and 'tis ſaid,
There was no George, I wiſh there was a Maid.

GERYON [Γηρυων, Gr. i. e. the Bawler,] as the Poets tell us, this Geryon was a monſtrous Giant that had three Heads. But the truth of the Matter is, There was a City in the Euxine Sea, call'd, Tricarenia, [Τριχαρηνια, Gr. i. e. three Heads] where Geryon dwelt in great Reputation, and abounding in Wealth, and, among the reſt, had an admirable Herd of Oxen: Hercules coming to drive them away ſlew Geryon who oppos'd him; and they that ſaw him drive away the Oxen admired at it, and to thoſe that enquired concerning the Matter, they anſwered, that Hercules had driven away the Oxen of Tricarenian Geryon; from which ſome imagined that Geryon had three Heads: And this gave birth to the Fiction. Palæphatus.

GO'LDEN-RULE [is ſo called by way of Excellency] which is either ſingle or compound, direct or inverſe. The ſingle Golden-Rule, is when three Numbers or Terms are propoſed, and a fourth proportional to them is demanded; as the Queſtion following; if four Horſes eat eighteen Buſhels of Corn in a certain Number of Days, what will eight Horſes require in the ſame Time, viz. thirty ſix Buſhels.

The compound Golden-Rule, is when five Terms are propounded, in order to find out a ſixth, as if four Horſes eat eight Buſhels of Corn in three Months, how much will ſerve eight for nine Months.

The Golden-Rule direct, is when the Senſe or Tenour of the Queſtion requires the fourth Number ſought, to bear ſuch proportion to the ſecond, as the third Number has to the firſt: So in the firſt Queſtion, as eight is the double of four, ſo ought the fourth Number to be the double of eighteen, i. e. thirty ſix.

The Golden-Rule inverſe, is when the fourth Term required ought to proceed from the ſecond Term, according to the ſame Rate or Proportion, that the firſt proceeds from the third; as for Example, if four Horſes do require a certain Quantity of Corn ſix Days, how many Days will the ſame Quantity ſerve eight Horſes: Here four is half eight, ſo ought the fourth Term required to be half ſix. This is called alſo the Rule of Three indirect or backwards.

GRACES [in the Heathen Theology] were a ſet of fabulous Deities, three in Number, who attended on Venus, ſuppoſed to be the Daughters of Jupiter, their Names Aglaia, Thalia and Euphroſyne.

The GRACES are ſaid to be the beneficent Daughters of Jupiter; and they will have them to have been Born of Eurydomene, who poſſeſſed ample Fortunes. And ſome ſay that Juno was Mother of the Graces. For the Graces are the moſt Noble and Illuſtrious of all the Goddeſſes.

The nakedneſs of them intimates, that even poor Perſons, who have no Wealth at all, may be able by their Services to gratify Perſons in ſome Things. Some think that by their being repreſented Naked is intimated, that we ought to be ready to do good Offices.

Some will have the Graces to be but two; others three. They that make them two, do it becauſe ſome ought to do good Offices, and others ought to be grateful to them of whom they receive them. They are feigned to be three, becauſe he that has had experience of being made amends for a kindneſs done, ought not to leave off doing good Offices, but it is his Duty to be doing again, and continually doing good Offices.

The Graces are called χάριτες of τὸ χαίρειν, Joy; becauſe thoſe who are beneficent are of a cheerful Countenance, and their beneficence makes them that receive it cheerful.

They are repreſented handſome, both becauſe they are beautiful themſelves, and in that they add a Luſtre to the Beauty of thoſe that exerciſe Liberality, and are prone to do good Offices.

HEAT, one of the four primary Qualities, which (according to the new Philoſophy) conſiſts very much in the rapidity of Motion, in the ſmaller Particles of Bodies, and that every way; or in the Parts being rapidly agitated all ways.

HEAT [in a hot Body] is the agitation of the Parts of that Body, and the Fire contained in it; by which agitation a Motion is produced in our Bodies, exciting the Idea of heat in our Minds; and heat in reſpect of us is only that Idea or Senſation in our Mind; and in the hot Body is nothing but Motion that occaſions it: And Heat (ſay our Philoſophers) is no more in the Fire that burns our Finger, than Pain in Needle that pricks it. No heat is ſenſible to us, unleſs the Body, that acts upon our Organs of Senſe, has a greater degree of heat than that of our Organs; for if it be faint and weak it is ſaid to be cold.

Actual HEAT [in Phyſick] is that which is an effect of real elementary Fire.

HEAT [in Geography] is diverſified according to the different Climes, Seaſons, &c. and ariſes from the different Angles under which the ſame Rays ſtrike upon the ſurface of the Earth: For it is ſhewn by Mechanicks, that a moving Body ſtriking perpendicularly upon another, acts with its whole force; and that a Body that ſtrikes directly, by how much more it deviates from the perpendicular acts with the leſs force.

To HEAT [haꝺian, Sax.] to make hot.

Potential HEAT is that which is found in Wine, Pepper, and ſeveral chymical Preparations; as Brandy, Oil of Turpentine, &c.

HETERO'DROMUS Vectis [in Mechanicks] is a Leaver, or that where the hypomoclion is placed, between the Power and the Weight; and where the Weight is elevated by the Deſcent of the Power, and e contra.

HETERO'DROMUS [of Ἕτερος and δρόμος, Gr.] is a ſtatical Term for the common Vectis or Leaver, which has the Hypomoclion placed below the Power and Weight. Of this kind of Leavers are the Prong and Dung Fork, whoſe Hypomoclion is the Labourer's Knee. And all Pincers, Sheers, cutting Knives, &c. faſtened to Blocks are double.

Perpetual HETERODROMOUS Leavers [in Staticks] are the Wheel, Windlaſs, Capſtan, Crane, &c. and alſo the outermoſt Wheels of all Wind and Water Mills, and all Log-Wheels.

HETEROGENEAL, HETEROGENEOUS } [heterogeneus, L. Ἑτερογενὴς, Gr.] of a different Nature, Kind or Quality.

HETEROGE'NEAL, HETEROGE'NEOUS } Bodies [in Mechanicks] thoſe Bodies whoſe denſity is unequal in different Parts of their bulk.

HETEROGE'NEAL Light [according to Sir Iſaac Newton] is Light that conſiſts of Rays of differing Degrees of Refrangibility: Thus the common Light of the Sun or Clouds is heterogeneal, being a mixture of all ſorts of Rays.

HETEROGENEAL Nouns [in Grammar.] are ſuch as have one Gender in the ſinglular Number, and another in the plural.

HETEROGENEAL Numbers, are those referred to different Unites or Integers.

HETEROGENEAL Quantities, are those which are of such different kind and considerations, as that one of them, taken any number of Times, never equals or exceeds the other.

HETEROGENEAL Surds [Algebra] are such as have different radical Signs.

HETEROGE'NEITY [in Physick] the Quality or Disposition that renders a thing heterogeneous.

HETEROG'EN'EITIES [with Chymists] the Parts and Principles of different Natures (such as Oil, Salt, Spirit, Water and Earth) that can be separated from any Body, being analiz'd by Fire, are so called, because they are all of very different Natures and Kinds from one another.

HETEROGENIUM [in Physick] is used when any thing that is disproportionate is mingled with the Blood and Spirits.

HETEROGENEOUS Particles [with Philosophers] are such as are of different Kinds, Natures and Qualities, of which generally all Bodies are composed.

HETEROGE'NEOUSNESS [of Ἑτερογένης of ἕτερος and γένος, Gr. kind] heterogeneity; the being of a different Nature, Kind or Quality.

HETERORHY'THMUS [of Ἕτερος, another, and ῥυθμός, Gr. the Pulse] a Word used of Pulses, when they beat differently or irregularly in Diseases; some use it for a course of Life unsuitable to the Age of those who live in it; as if a young Man should use the way of living of an old Man.

HETERO'SCII [Ἑτερόσκιοι of Ἕτερος, another, and σκία, Shadow] the People who inhabit between the Equator and the two Tropicks, in either of the temperate Zones; who have their Shadow, at Noon, cast on a contrary Side towards one of the Poles, viz. that which is above their horizon.

HETEROU'SII [of Ἕτερος, another, and οὐσία, Gr. Substance] such as held that the Son of God was not of a Substance like and similar to that of the Father.

HEW } [hype, Sax.] form, colour, appearance.
HUE }

HE'WER [of heaian, Sax.] a Cutter of Timber or Stones.

HE'XACHORD [Ἑξάχορδον, Gr.] a Chord in Musick, commonly call'd by the Moderns a sixth.

HEXAE'DRON [Ἑξάεδρον, Gr.] one of the five regular Bodies, having six Sides, a Cube.

HE'XAGON [Ἑξάγωνος, Gr.] a solid Figure having six equal Sides, and as many Angles, a Cube, a Parallelopepid bounded by six equal Squares.

HEXA'GONALLY [of Ἑξάγωνος of Ἕξ, and γωνία, Gr. a Corner] after the manner of an hexagon or a geometrical Figure that has six equal Sides, and as many Angles.

HEXA'MERON [Ἑξαμέρον of Ἕξ, six, and ἡμέρα, a Day, Gr.] a Name given to Discourses or Commentaries on the first six Days of the World, according to the first Chapter of Genesis.

HEXA'METER [Ἑξάμετρος of Ἕξ, six. and μέτρον, Gr. measure] consisting of six Feet.

The following Tables being a curious and admirable Contrivance, not doubting but that they will be acceptable to the curious Reader, I present them.

The Use of the Tables for making hexameter Latin Verses, and the manner of the Operation.

Observe these several Directions following;

1. Every Verse made by these Tables, will be an hexameter Verse, and will be made up of just six Latin Words.

2. Every one of these six Words are to be produc'd out of these six Tables respectively, viz. the first Word out of the first Table, the second Word out of the second Table, the third out of the third Table; and so of the fourth, fifth and sixth.

4. When you are about to make any Verse by these Tables, you must on a piece of Paper write down any six of the nine Figures at pleasure.

4. That these six Figures are as so many respective Keys to the six Tables. The first Figure towards the left Hand is always to be applied to the first Table, the second Figure towards the right Hand to the second Table, and so every one of the six Tables.

So that the first Figure produces out of the first Table the first Word of the Verse, the second Figure by the second Table the second Word of the Verse; and so every Figure of the six, their respective Words out of their respective Tables.

5. When you have pitched upon six Figures to make your Set of; and written them down on a Paper, the Rule for the Operation is this: With the Figure that belongs to its proper Table, you must number on with the Squares on the said Table, till you come to nine in counting upon the Squares (always reckoning the first Square of the Table one more than the Figure, except it be nine; and then you are always to count the first Square or Letter of the Table one) at which ninth Square or Letter, you must make a Stop (for in the whole Operation you must never count past nine) and write that Letter down on a Paper, and that is to be the first Letter of the Latin Word. From thence proceed, till you come to the ninth Square or Letter beyond, and set that down, and so on, till the Word is wrought out by the Table, which you will know by this, that when the Word is ended, if you number on till the ninth Square, you will find it a Blank. As for Example: Having chosen the Number following, 1 3 2 4 3 6.

The first Figure towards the left Hand being (1) belongs to the first Table, and therefore I call the first Square or Letter of that Table 2, the second Square 3, the third 4, and so on, till I come to 9, at which I stop, and the Letter being (l) I set it down; and because it is to be the first Letter of the first Word, I set it down in a great Letter; as follows.

Lurida Sistra, puto producunt fœdera quædam.

Then the next Square, wherein I found that Letter (l) I reckon 1, and count till I come to the 9th Square, again from the said (l) wherein I find the Letter (u) which I put down next to (l) as above, from thence I count to the 9th Square further, and find the Letter (r) which having set down, I count on to the 9th Square beyond, and find the Letter (i) which having set down, I count on again to the 9th Square farther, and find the Letter (d) which having set down, I count on again to the 9th Square, and there find the Letter (a) which having set down, I count on to the 9th Square further, and there find a Blank, by which I know the Word is ended. Which is Lurida, as in the Verse.

To work the second Word out of the second Table.

The second Figure being 3, I apply it to the second Table, and call the first Square thereof 4, the second 5, the third 6, and so reckon the Squares in Order, as in the first Table; and finding therein the Letter (f) which having written down on the Paper in the same Line with Lurida at a convenient Distance, because it is to begin another Word, and beginning from the Square, in which I found (s) I count the Squares onward, till I come to the 9th, and there finding the Letter (i) I write down, and then proceed to count on, till I come to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (t) having set it down, I count on to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (r) which I set down, I count to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (a) and counting on to the 9th Square, I find it a Blank, by which I find the Word is ended, which is Sistra.

To work the third Word out of the third Table.

I apply to it the 3d Figure in Order, which is 2, and therefore call the first Square of that Table 3, the second Square 4, the third 5, and so orderly, till I number to the 9th Square, in which finding the Letter (p) having set it down in the same Line at a convenient Distance; because it is to begin another Word, I count from that Square, till I come to the 9th, and finding the Letter (n) I set that down, and proceed to the next 9th Square, and finding the Letter (t] which having set down, I count from that Square to the next 9th, and finding the Letter (o) I set that down, and proceeding thence to the next 9th find a Blank, by which I know the Word is finished, and is Puto.

To work out the fourth Word of the Verse out of the fourth Table.

I apply the 4th Figure in Order, which is 4 to the 4th Table, and count the first Square of it 5, the second 6, and so proceeding to the 9th Square, where finding the Letter (p) I write it down in the same Line at a convenient Distance, because it is the first Letter of a Word, and proceeding to the next 9th Square, I find the Letter (r) which having written down, I proceed to the next 9th Square, and find the Letter (o), and in the next 9th Square the Letter (d), in the next 9th the Letter (u), in the next 9th (c), in the next 9th (u), in the next 9th (n), in the next 9th (t), and in the next 9th a Blank, by which I find the Word is ended, and is Producunt.

To work the fifth Word of the Verse out of the fifth Table.

The fifth Figure 3 I apply to the first Square of the 5th Table, calling it 4, and counting to the 9th Square, as before I find (f), and thence to the 9th (æ), and thence to the 9th (d), and thence to the 9th (e), and thence to the 9th (r), and thence to the 9th (a), and thence to the 9th finding a Blank, I perceive the Word is finished, which is Fœdera.

To work the sixth Word of the Verse out of the sixth Table.

The sixth and last Figure of the set being 6, I apply it to the first Square of the 6th Table, and counting it 7, count to the 9th Square, I find (q) which being set down as before, I proceed to the next 9th and find (u), and in the next 9th

9th (æ), in the next (d), in the next (a), in the next (m), and in the next a Blank, by which I know the Word is ended, and is quædam, and the whole Line is:

Lurida Siſtra, puto, producunt fœdera quædam.

Accordingly theſe following Numbers made choice of, and wrought out by the Tables, according to the foregoing Method, will produce the following Verſes.

The Number 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, will produce.

Lurida Scorta palam prænarrant crimina nigra.

The Number 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2.

Barbara caſtra, puto, cauſabunt agmina dira.

The Number 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3.

Martia Siſtra, patet, monſtrabunt fœdera multæ.

The Number 4, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4,

Aſpera vincla domi producunt lumina prava.

The Number 5, 5, 5, 5, 5, 5,

Horrida bella tuis portendunt verbera acerba.

The Number 6, 6, 6, 6, 6, 6,

Peſſima damna pati promittunt prælia quædam.

The Number 7, 7, 7, 7, 7, 7,

Ignea ſigna fortis proritant pocula ſæpe.

The Number 8, 8, 8, 8, 8, 8,

Turbida fata ſequi præmonſtrant tempora dura.

The Number 9, 9, 9, 9, 9, 9,

Effera tela, ferunt, promulgant ſidera ſæva.

The Number 1, 3, 2, 4, 3, 6,

Lurida Siſtra, puti producunt fœdera quædam.

The Number 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9,

Martia vincla tuis promittunt pocula ſæva.

And after the ſame Method, by tranſpoſing the Figures, may be wrought out of theſe Tables, as many different Verſes, to the Number of 300000, and upwards.

HEXA'NGULAR [of Ἕξ, Gr. and angulus, L.] the ſame as hexagonal.

HEXAPE'TALOUS [of Ἕξ, ſix, and πέτηλον, Gr. a Leaf] compoſed of ſix Leaves, as the Felix, Pulſatilla, &c.

The following Tables being a curious and admirable Contrivance, not doubting but that they will be acceptable to the curious Reader, I present them.

The Use of the Tables for making hexameter Latin Verses, and the manner of the Operation.

Observe these several Directions following;

1. Every Verse made by these Tables, will be an hexameter Verse, and will be made up of just six Latin Words.

2. Every one of these six Words are to be produc'd out of these six Tables respectively, viz. the first Word out of the first Table, the second Word out of the second Table, the third out of the third Table; and so of the fourth, fifth and sixth.

4. When you are about to make any Verse by these Tables, you must on a piece of Paper write down any six of the nine Figures at pleasure.

4. That these six Figures are as so many respective Keys to the six Tables. The first Figure towards the left Hand is always to be applied to the first Table, the second Figure towards the right Hand to the second Table, and so every one of the six Tables.

So that the first Figure produces out of the first Table the first Word of the Verse, the second Figure by the second Table the second Word of the Verse; and so every Figure of the six, their respective Words out of their respective Tables.

5. When you have pitched upon six Figures to make your Set of; and written them down on a Paper, the Rule for the Operation is this: With the Figure that belongs to its proper Table, you must number on with the Squares on the said Table, till you come to nine in counting upon the Squares (always reckoning the first Square of the Table one more than the Figure, except it be nine; and then you are always to count the first Square or Letter of the Table one) at which ninth Square or Letter, you must make a Stop (for in the whole Operation you must never count past nine) and write that Letter down on a Paper, and that is to be the first Letter of the Latin Word. From thence proceed, till you come to the ninth Square or Letter beyond, and set that down, and so on, till the Word is wrought out by the Table, which you will know by this, that when the Word is ended, if you number on till the ninth Square, you will find it a Blank. As for Example: Having chosen the Number following, 1 3 2 4 3 6.

The first Figure towards the left Hand being (1) belongs to the first Table, and therefore I call the first Square or Letter of that Table 2, the second Square 3, the third 4, and so on, till I come to 9, at which I stop, and the Letter being (l) I set it down; and because it is to be the first Letter of the first Word, I set it down in a great Letter; as follows.

Lurida Sistra, puto producunt fœdera quædam.

Then the next Square, wherein I found that Letter (l) I reckon 1, and count till I come to the 9th Square, again from the said (l) wherein I find the Letter (u) which I put down next to (l) as above, from thence I count to the 9th Square further, and find the Letter (r) which having set down, I count on to the 9th Square beyond, and find the Letter (i) which having set down, I count on again to the 9th Square farther, and find the Letter (d) which having set down, I count on again to the 9th Square, and there find the Letter (a) which having set down, I count on to the 9th Square further, and there find a Blank, by which I know the Word is ended. Which is Lurida, as in the Verse.

To work the second Word out of the second Table.

The second Figure being 3, I apply it to the second Table, and call the first Square thereof 4, the second 5, the third 6, and so reckon the Squares in Order, as in the first Table; and finding therein the Letter (s) which having written down on the Paper in the same Line with Lurida at a convenient Distance, because it is to begin another Word, and beginning from the Square, in which I found (s) I count the Squares onward, till I come to the 9th, and there finding the Letter (i) I write down, and then proceed to count on, till I come to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (t) having set it down, I count on to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (r) which I set down, I count to the 9th Square, and finding the Letter (a) and counting on to the 9th Square, I find it a Blank, by which I find the Word is ended, which is Sistra.

To work the third Word out of the third Table.

I apply to it the 3d Figure in Order, which is 2, and therefore call the first Square of that Table 3, the second Square 4, the third 5, and so orderly, till I number to the 9th Square, in which finding the Letter (p) having set it down in the same Line at a convenient Distance; because it is to begin another Word, I count from that Square, till I come to the 9th, and finding the Letter (u) I set that down, and proceed to the next 9th Square, and finding the Letter (t] which having set down, I count from that Square to the next 9th, and finding the Letter (o) I set that down, and proceeding thence to the next 9th find a Blank, by which I know the Word is finished, and is Puto.

To work out the fourth Word of the Verse out of the fourth Table.

I apply the 4th Figure in Order, which is 4 to the 4th Table, and count the first Square of it 5, the second 6, and so proceeding to the 9th Square, where finding the Letter (p) I write it down in the same Line at a convenient Distance, because it is the first Letter of a Word, and proceeding to the next 9th Square, I find the Letter (r) which having written down, I proceed to the next 9th Square, and find the Letter (o), and in the next 9th Square the Letter (d), in the next 9th the Letter (u), in the next 9th (c), in the next 9th (u), in the next 9th (n), in the next 9th (t), and in the next 9th a Blank, by which I find the Word is ended, and is Producunt.

To work the fifth Word of the Verse out of the fifth Table.

The fifth Figure 3 I apply to the first Square of the 5th Table, calling it 4, and counting to the 9th Square, as before I find (f), and thence to the 9th (æ), and thence to the 9th (d), and thence to the 9th (e), and thence to the 9th (r), and thence to the 9th (a), and thence to the 9th finding a Blank, I perceive the Word is finished, which is Fœdera.

To work the sixth Word of the Verse out of the sixth Table.

The sixth and last Figure of the set being 6, I apply it to the first Square of the 6th Table, and counting it 7, count to the 9th Square, I find (q) which being set down as before, I proceed to the next 9th and find (u), and in the next 9th

9th (æ), in the next (d), in the next (a), in the next (m), and in the next a Blank, by which I know the Word is ended, and is quædam, and the whole Line is:

Lurida Siſtra, puto, producunt fœdera quædam.

HUSKANAWING, a Solemnity practised by the Virginian Indians, once every fourteen or sixteen Years. It is an Institution or Discipline that all young Men must pass under before they can be admitted to be of the number of Great Men, Officers, or Cockarouses of the Nation.

The choicest and briskest young Men of the Town, and such only as have acquired some Treasure by their Travels and Hunting, are chosen out by the Rulers to be Huskanaw'd, and who ever refuses to undergo this Process, dares not remain among them.

The Ceremony is performed after the manner following: After the performance of several odd preparatory Ceremonies, the principal part of the Business is to carry them into the Woods, and there to keep them under Confinement, and destitute of all Society for several Months, giving them no other Sustenance but the Infusion or Decoction of some poisonous intoxicating Roots; by vertue of which Physick, and the severity of the Discipline which they undergo, they become stark mad: In which raving Condition they are kept 18 or 20 Days. During these Extremities they are shut up Night and Day in a strong Inclosure, made on purpose, in shape like a Sugar-loaf, and every way open like a Lattice, for the Air to pass through. In this Cage, after they have been shut up till the Doctors find they have drank sufficiently of the Wysoccan (as they call this mad Potion) they gradually restore them to their Senses, by lessening the Intoxication of their Diet, they bring them back into the Town, while still wild and crazy, through the violence of the Medicine.

It is pretended that they in this time drink so much of the Water of Lethe, that they perfectly lose all remembrance of former things, even of their Relations, Parents, and Language; and after this they are very fearful of discovering any thing of their former remembrance; for if such a thing should happen to any of them, they must immediately be Huskanaw'd again: And the second time the Usage is so severe, that seldom any one escapes with his Life. Thus they must pretend to have forgot the very use of their Tongues, so as not to be able to speak, nor understand any thing that is spoken, till they learn it again. And they are for some time under the guard of their Keepers, who constantly wait upon them every where, till they have learnt all things perfectly over again.

The undergoing this Discipline, is, with them, the most meritorious thing in the World, in order to Preferments to the greatest Posts in the Nation, which they claim as their undoubted Right at the next Promotion.

The Indians pretend that this violent Method of taking away their Memory, is to release the Youth from all their childish Impressions, and from that strong Partiality to Persons and Things which is contracted before Reason takes place.

They hope by this Proceeding to root out all the Prepossessions and unreasonable Prejudices which are fixt in the Minds of Children; so that the young Men, when they come to themselves again, their Reason may act freely, without being biassed by Custom and Education.

Thus also they become discharged from the Remembrance of any ties of Blood, and are established in a state of equality and perfect freedom to order their Actions and dispose of their Persons, without any other controul than that of the Law of Nature.

Iron [Iron, Sax.] a hard, fuſible, malleable Metal. Iron is accounted the hardeſt of all other Metals, as being the moſt difficult to melt; and yet it is one of the lighteſt Metals, and eaſieſt to be deſtroy'd by ruſt, by reaſon of the Steams which proceed from it: it is engendered of a moſt impure Quickſilver, mixed with a thick Sulphur, filthy and burning.

Iron [with Chymiſts] is called Mars and repreſented by this Character ♂ which is an Hieroglyphick and denotes Gold at the Bottom; only its upper Part, too ſharp, volatile and half corroſive, which being taken away the Iron would become Gold.

The firſt Character of Iron is, That it is the heavieſt of all Bodies after Copper. Its ſecond, That it is the leaſt ductile, the hardeſt and moſt brittle of all Metals. Third, That it is very fixed, as to its metaline Part, not ſulphurous one. Iron being well purged of its Sulphur by a vehement Fire, becomes harder, compacter, and ſomewhat lighter, and is called Steel. Fourth, It ignites before it fuſes, and fuſes with much difficulty; and contrary to the Nature of all other Metals, the more it is ignited, the ſofter and more ductile it becomes: being ſcarce flexible or malleable at all before ignition. Fifth, It is diſſoluble by almoſt all Bodies in Nature, i. e. that have any degree of Activity, as Salt, Dew, the Breath, Fire, Water, Air, &c. Sixth, It is very Sonorous and Elaſtick, tho' the Sound it yields is leſs ſweet than that of Copper. Seventh, Of all Bodies it is the only one that is attracted by the Load-ſtone.

Iron Oar, is found in the Mines, in Grains and Lumps, and being melted and burned in Forges, is brought into Forms by main force of Fire. Iron being heated red hot, and then put into Water hardens it; and by the often doing ſo, it becomes Steel, which is more ſtiff and hard; but yet more brittle; but has more of a ſpringy Nature to leap back, than any other Metal; for both Steel and Iron have abundance of Pores, which go turning and winding like Screws, by means of which it approaches to the Load-ſtone, and is ſaid to be a-kin to the Load-ſtone, being dug out of the ſame Mines. If a Plate of Iron be put in the Fire, and made red hot, it (is ſaid) will come out longer than it was when it was put in.

JU'NO [ſo called of Juvando, L. helping] according to the Poets, was the Siſter and Wife of Jupiter, the Queen of the Gods, and the Goddeſs of Kingdoms and Riches; ſhe had alſo a Juriſdiction and Command over Marriages and Childbearing; and on theſe Accounts had many fair Temples and Altars erected in Honour of her. As to her marrying with her Brother Jupiter, they tell us, that ſhe was not willing to conſent to it; but Jupiter effected it by the following Stratagem. He took upon him the ſhape of a Cuckow, and in a Storm lighted upon her Lap, and Juno out of Pity, to ſhelter it from the Weather, put it into her Boſom; but when the ſubtil Bird felt the warmth of her Body, it took again the Form of Jupiter, and obtain'd his deſire by a promiſe of Marriage; and on this Account, at Argos, a Cuckow was adored for Jupiter.

JU'NO was repreſented upon a Throne, ſitting adorn'd with a Crown on her Head that touch'd the Clouds, and a Scepter in her Hand, and round about her the fair and beautiful Iris (the Rainbow) and attended by Peacocks (her beloved Bird) on both Sides.

JU'NO is ſometimes taken for the Moon, and as ſuch, is painted ſitting upon Lions holding a Scepter and a Spindle in her Hands, with Beams of Light about her Face.

She was ſometimes painted with a pair of Sheers and a Platter in her Hand, clothed in the Skin of a Goat, and girded with Vine-branches, and a Lioneſs under her Feet. Sometimes ſhe was painted with a Scepter, on the top of which was the Image of a Cuckow, and the two Meteors Caſtor and Pollux waiting on her.

JU'NO [by modern Painters] is alſo repreſented with black Hair and bright Eyes, clothed in a ſky-colour'd Mantle, wrought with Gold and Peacock's-Eyes, like the Circles in a Peacock's Train.

IVORY [Ebur, L. Yvoire, F.] the Tooth of an Elephant.

JU'PITER [was ſo called of Juvando, and alſo Dieſpiter, q. the Father of the Day; and by the Greeks Ζεὺς of τῷ ζῆν, to live] according to the Poets, was the Son of Saturn and Cybele, who having expelled his Father his Kingdom, divided the Empire of the World between himſelf and his Brothers; he took to his Share the Command of Heaven, and aſſigned the Waters to his Brother Neptune, and ſent Pluto to command in Hell.

He was call'd the Father of the Gods, and the King of Men, becauſe Nature is the Cauſe of the Eſſence of Things, as Parents are of Children; and he only had the Power to handle the Thunderbolts, and to hold the World in Subjection. He had a great many Names, as Jupiter Capitolinus, Jupiter Inventor, Jupiter Feretrius, &c. and as many Statues, and many Temples erected to him.

The Heathens painted him like an old Man ſitting upon a Throne with a Crown upon his Head, clothed with a rich Garment ſparkling with Stars, holding in his Hand two Globes, which repreſented Heaven and Earth, and Neptune's Trident under him, and a Carpet repreſenting the Tail and Feathers of a Peacock. Sometimes they pictured him with Thunderbolts in his Hand, in the Form of crooked Iron Bars, ſharp at the End, joined together in the Middle.

The Egyptians worſhipped him in the Figure of a Ram, and repreſented his Providence by a Scepter, with a great Eye upon the Top of it.

JU'PITER [by modern Painters] is repreſented with long black curled Hair, in a purple Robe trimm'd with Gold, and ſitting on a golden Throne, or the Back of an Eagle (which he choſe for his Bird, becauſe when he went to deliver his Father out of his Confinement, an Eagle gave him an Omen of happy Victory) encompaſſed with bright yellow Clouds, and holding in his Hand Thunderbolts, JU'PITER [Hieroglyphically] was by the Antients repreſented without Ears, to intimate that God ſeems not to liſten or take notice of the profaneneſs of Men, nor of their impious Diſcourſes: And ſometimes with one hundred Hands, and as many Feet, to intimate the multiplicity of Effects, which proceed from his Agency, and that he ſuſtains all Things from falling into confuſion.

JUSTINGS } [joutes of jouter, F. to run at Tilts] were JUSTS } Exerciſes uſed in former Times by ſuch Perſons, who deſir'd to gain Reputation in Feats of Arms, of whatſoever Degree or Quality, from the King to the private Gentleman; they were uſually performed at great Solemnities, as Marriages of Princes; and alſo on other Occaſions. The Time and Place being appointed, Challenges were ſent abroad into other Nations to all that deſir'd to ſignalize themſelves. And Rewards were appointed by the Prince for thoſe that came off Conquerors. As for the Place it was various; in the Year 1395 there was great Juſting on London-Bridge, between David, Earl of Craford in Scotland, and the Lord Wells of England, &c. In the Time of King Edward the III. Juſtings were frequent in Cheap-ſide, and on the North-ſide of Bow-Church, there was a Building of Stone erected, call'd Sildam or Crownfild, to ſee the Juſtings that were frequently perform'd there, between the End of Soper-Lane and the Croſs. It was built on this Occaſion, in the Year 1330 there was a great Juſting of all the ſtout Earls, Barons and Nobles of the Realm, which laſted three Days, where Queen Philippa, with many Ladies, fell from a Scaffold of Timber, but received no Harm; after which the King built it ſtrongly of Stone for himſelf, the Queen and Perſons of high Rank, to behold the Juſtings. This Sildam remained till the Time of Henry VIII, as it appears in that he came thither, dreſs'd in the Habit of a Yeoman of the Guard, with a Patiſon on his Shoulder, and having taken a View of the Watches of the City, went away undiſcovered.

Smithfield alſo was a Place for performing theſe Exerciſes; in the Year 357 great and royal Juſts were held in Smithfield, there being preſent the Kings of England, France and Scotland, and their Nobility. And in the time of Richard II. royal Juſts and Tournaments were proclaimed by Heralds in ſeveral Courts in Europe to be performed in Smithfield, to begin on Sunday next after the Feaſt of St. Michael. At the Day appointed there iſſued out of the Tower, about 3 in the Afternoon, 60 Courſers apparelled for the Juſts, upon every one an Eſquire of Honour, riding a ſoft Pace, then came forth 60 Ladies of Honour mounted upon Palfreys riding on the one ſide richly apparelled, and every Lady led a Knight with a Chain of Gold. Thoſe Knights that were of the King's Party had their Armour and Apparel adorn'd with white Harts, and Crowns of Gold about the Harts Necks, and ſo they rode thro' the Streets of London to Smithfield, with a great number of Trumpets and other Inſtruments of Muſick before them. Where the Ladies that led the Knights, were taken down from their Palfreys and went up to their Seats prepared for them. The Eſquires of Honour alighted from their Courſers, and the Knights mounted. And after the Helmets were ſet on their Heads, and they were ready at all Points, Proclamation was made by the Heralds, and then the Juſts began. Theſe Juſts laſted many Days with great Feaſting. The manner of it was thus, the Ground being railed about, in which the Juſters were to exerciſe, the Contenders were let in at ſeveral Barriers, being compleatly armed from Head to Foot, and mounted on the ſtouteſt Horſes; who after they had pay'd their reſpects to the King, the Judges and Ladies, they took their ſeveral Stations, and then the Trumpets ſounded and they having couched their Lances, that is, having ſet the But-end againſt their Breaſt, the Point toward their Adverſary, ſpurred their Horſes, and ran furiouſly one againſt another, ſo that the Points of their Spears lighting upon the Armour of each other, gave a terrible ſhock, and generally flew to pieces.

If neither Party received any injury, they wheel'd about, took freſh Lances, and ran a 2d time, and ſo a third, and if neither ſuffered any diſgrace in 3 Encounters, they both came off with Honour.

There were many Circumſtances relating to theſe Performances; as if a Man was unhorſed, he was quite diſgraced, or if he was ſhaken in the Saddle, or let his Lance fall, or loſt any Piece of his Armour, or wounded his Antagoniſt's Horſe, &c. all which were accounted diſreputable. And there were alſo certain Rules for diſtributing the Prizes to them that behaved themſelves with the greateſt Gallantry.

Chriſtian Kings appointed many religious Ceremonies to be obſerved at the Creation of Knights, and none were admitted to the Order of Knights, but ſuch as had merited the Honour by ſome commendable and extraordinary Exploits. They were antiently diſtinguiſhed by a Belt, a Target, a Sword, or ſome martial Token. But now the Honour being grown cheap, theſe Ceremonies have been laid aſide, and there goes nothing now to the making a Knight in England, but the King's touching him with a Sword as he kneels, and ſaying, Riſe up Sir R. N.

KNIGHTS Bannerets, the Ceremony of their Creation is thus. The King, or his General, at the head of his Army, drawn up in order of Battle after a Victory, under the royal Standard diſplay'd, attended by all the Officers and the Nobility of the Court, receives the Knight, led by two Knights of Note or other Men renowned in Arms, carrying his Pennon or Guidon of Arms in his Hand; being preceeded by the Heralds, who proclaim his valiant Atchievements, for which he has merited to be made a Knight Banneret, and to diſplay his Banner in the Field; then the King or the General ſays, Advances toy Banneret, and cauſes the Point of his Pennon to be rent off, and the new Kinght is ſent back to his Tent, the Trumpets ſounding before him, and the Nobility and Officers attending him, where they are nobly entertained. This Order is certainly moſt Honourable, becauſe never conferr'd but upon the performance of ſome heroick Action in the Field; whereas all other Orders are beſtow'd by Favour, or other meaner Motives. But there have been none of theſe Knights made for many Years paſt.

KNIGHTS Baronets, is a modern degree of Honour, and next to a Baron; they have preceedency before all Knights, except thoſe of the Garter, Bannerets and Privy-Counſellors, and the Honour is hereditary in the Male Line. This Order was firſt inſtituted in the Year 1611 by King James I. they are created by Patent, the Proem whereof ſignifies, that it is for propagating a Plantation in the Province of Ulſter in Ireland, for which purpoſe each of them was to maintain thirty Soldiers in Ireland for three Years, allowing each Soldier 8 d. per Diem, the whole Sum of which was paid into the Exchequer upon paſſing the Patent. They are to bear in a Canton, or in an Eſcutcheon, the Arms of Ulſter, viz. a Field Argent, a ſiniſter Hand couped at the Wriſt Gules.

BARONS [prob. of Barones, L. Men of Valour] are Peers of England, but of the loweſt Dignity, and as ſuch ſit in Parliament, as all the Peers of England do by their Baronies, tho' they be Dukes, Marqueſſes, or Earls beſides, and likewiſe Archbiſhops and Biſhops have Baronies annexed to them. Barons are of three ſorts.

BARONS [by Tenure] are Biſhops, who hold their Baronies by vertue of their being choſen to their Sees.

BARONS [by Writ] are ſuch as are called to ſit in Parliament by their Sovereign, without any precedent Title.

BARONS [by Patent] their Title is, Right Noble Lord; King Charles II. gave the Barons a Circle of Gold, with ſix Pearls ſet cloſe to the Rim. He is likewiſe allowed to have the cover of his Cup held underneath while he is drinking; and a Baroneſs may have her Train held up in the Preſence of a Viſcounteſs. The manner of erecting a Baron by Patent is as follows, he appears in Court in his long Robe and Hood, attended by ſeveral Perſons of Quality; two Heralds walk before him, followed by Garter King at Arms, holding the King's Writ; a Baron, ſupported by two Gentlemen of diſtinction, brings the Robe or Mantle, and ſo they enter the King's Preſence, kneeling three times; then Garter delivers the Writ to the Lord Chamberlain, and when in reading they come to the Word Inveſtivimus, the King puts on his Mantle, and the Writ being read, declares him and his Heirs Barons.

KNIGHTS Batchelors [either of Bas Chevaliers, F. i. e. low Knights, or of Baccalaria, a kind of Fees or Farm, conſiſting of ſeveral Pieces of Ground, each of which contained twelve Acres, or as much as two Oxen would Pough; the Poſſeſſors of which Baccalaria were called Batchelors; others derive the Name of Baſtailler, F. to Combat or Fight] they were antiently called, as being the loweſt Order of Knights, or inferior to Bannerets. They were obliged to ſerve the King in his Wars at their own Expence, for the ſpace of forty Days. They are now called Equites Aurati in Latin; Equites, i. e. Horſemen, becauſe they were to ſerve on Horſeback; and Aurati, golden or gilded, becauſe they had gilt Spurs given them at their Creation. This Dignity was at firſt confin'd to military Men, but afterwards it was conferr'd on Men of the Robe. It was an antient Ceremony at the Creation Creation, to honour the Knights with the Girdle of Knighthood; which he who received was to go to Church and solemnly to offer his Sword upon the Altar, and to vow himself to the Service of God. In process of Time, besides the Girdle and Sword, gilt Spurs were added for the greater Ornament. The Ceremony of the Creation is very simple, the Candidate kneels down, and the King touches him lightly with a naked Sword, saying, Sois Chevalier au nom de Dien, F. i. e. Be a Knight in the Name of God; and afterwards Avance Chevalier A. B. These may be said to be the only Knights in England, besides those of the Garter and of the Bath, who are of a much higher Sphere; for Bannerets have been long disused, and Baronets are not properly Knights. When a Knight had committed a capital Offence, it was usual publickly to degrade and deprive him of his honour of Knighthood, which was done by ungirding his military Belt, taking off his Sword and breaking it, and hewing off his Spurs with a Hatchet, plucking his Gauntlet from him, and reversing his Escutcheon of Arms.

Knights of the Bath, this Order of Knighthood is of no less Antiquity than the Times of our Saxon Ancestors, and tho' the Original of it cannot be exactly determined, yet it appears that Geoffrey of Anjou, before his Marriage to Maud the Empress, Daughter to our King Henry I. was thus made a Knight at Rome, An. 1227. tho' Cambden and others write that it was instituted by Richard II. and Henry IV. An. 1339. upon this occasion, King Henry being in the Bath, and being inform'd by some Knight that two Widows were come to demand Justice of him, he immediately leap'd out of the Bath, saying, he ought to prefer doing Justice to his Subjects before the Pleasure of the Bath; and thereupon created Knights of the Bath. Some say these Knights were made within the Lists of the Bath, and that King Richard ordain'd that there should be no more than four of them; but King Henry IV. encreased them to forty six: their Motto was Tres in uno, L. i. e. Three in one, signifying the three theological Virtues. At the Creation of these Knights there were several religious Rites and Ceremonies performed, which usually belonged to Hermits and other holy Orders. First, When the Esquire to be knighted came to the Court, he was to be received by the King's Officers, and to have two Esquires of note to attend him; and if he came before Dinner, he was to carry up one Dish to the King's Table, after which those Esquires were to conduct him to his Chamber, and at Night he had his Beard shav'd and his Hair cut round. Then the King commanded his Chamberlain to go to the Chamber of this intended Knight, attended by several Knights and Esquires, with Musick, Singing Dancing, and there to inform him of Feats of Chivalry. Then the Esquire was put into the Bath, and when taken out put into a Bed without Curtains, there to lie till he was dry, and afterwards cloth'd with a Robe of Russet with long Sleeves, having a Hood to it, like that of an Hermit; then the old Knights conducted him to the Chapel, being accompanied with Musick, and other Esquires, Dancing and Sporting before him, where being entertain'd with Wine and Spices, they were dismiss'd with Thanks; the new Knight was to stay in the Chapel all Night, and spend it in Prayer, and the next Morning to confess his Sins to the Priest; and while Mass was saying, a Taper was burning before him, which he held in his Hand during the Gospel; at the Elevation an Esquire took off his Hood from his Head, and held it till the last Gospel. And Mass being ended, the same Esquire offered the Candle at the Altar and a Penny or more. After this the new Knight was put to Bed, and lay there till day Light. Then the Chamberlain and other Company went to his Chamber and said, Sir good Morrow to you, it is Time to get up and make your self ready: and having dress'd him, they mounted on Horseback, they conducted him to the Hall with Musick, a young Esquire carrying his Sword before him, holding it by the Point. Being come to the Hall Door, he was received by the Marshals and Ushers, who desired him to alight, and the Marshal was either to have his Horse or an hundred Shillings for his Fee; and being conducted up the Hall, there he stay'd while the King came, the young Esquire still holding his Sword. The King being come, he took one of the Spurs from the Chamberlain, and delivering it to some Person of Note, commanded him to put it on his right Heel, which was done kneeling, and the other Spur was put on by another Knight; which being done, the Knight holding up his Hands together, the King girt on his Sword, and embracing him about the Neck, said to him, Be thou a good Knight, kissing him. This being done, the Knights conducting him to the High Altar in the Chapel, he there promised to maintain the Rights of the Holy Church during his whole Life, and then ungirt his Sword and offered it to God, praying to God and the Saints that he might keep that Order to the end, after which he drank a Draught of Wine. Upon his going out of the Chapel, the King's Master Cook stood ready to take off his Spurs for his Fee, saying to him, I the King's Master Cook, am come to receive your Spurs for my Fee; and if you do any thing contrary to the Order of Kingthood (which God forbid) I shall hack your Spurs from your Heels. This being done, he was conducted again to the Hall by the Knights, where he sat the first at the Knight's Table, the Knights being about him, to be served as the other were; but was neither to Eat nor Drink at the Table, nor spit, nor look about him upwards or downwards any more than a Bride. But one of his Governors was to hold a Handkerchief before him when he was to spit, and when the King was departed, he was to be attended to his Chamber by Knights, Musick, &c. who taking their leave of him went to Dinner. When the Company were retired, he was disrobed and his Attire was to be given to the King at Arms or that Herald that attended, or to the Minstrels, with a Mark of Silver, if he were a Knight Batchelor; two Marks, if a Baron, and four, if an Earl or superior Rank; and his Russet Night-Cap or a Noble was given to the Watch. After this he was clothed with a blue Robe, with strait Sleeves in the fashion of a Priests, having a white Silk Lace hanging on his left Shoulder, which Lace he wore upon all his Garments, till he had gained some Honour and Renown in Arms, and was registred as of high Record, as the Nobles, Knights, &c. or till some great Prince or noble Lady did cut the Lace off, saying to him, Sir, we have heard so much of your true Renown concerning your Honour, which you have done in divers Parts, to the great Fame of Chivalry, as to your self and him that made you a Knight, that it is meet this Lace be taken from you. After Dinner the Knights and Gentlemen conduct him to the King's Presence, where he says, Right noble and renowned Sir, I do in all that I can give you thanks for these Honours, Courtesies and Bounty which you have vouchsafed me: and then takes his leave of the King; and then the Esquires Governors take their leave of their Master, with much Complaisance demanding their Robes and Fees according to the Custom.

LINE [linea, L.] a row of Words in Writing or Printing.

LINE [French Meaſure] the 12th Part of an Inch, or 144th Part of a Foot.

LINE [in Geometry] Quantity extended in length only, without either breadth or thickneſs, and is formed by the Motion of a Point.

Right LINE } [Geometry] a Line whoſe Points are equally
Strait LINE } placed between the two Extremes or Ends.

Curved LINE } [Geometry] a Line whoſe Points are not Crooked LINE } equally placed between the two Extremes.

LINE of Numbers, a Line uſually placed on Carpenters, &c. Rules or Sectors, which running parallel with it, ſhews the artificial Line, and is called Gunter's Line, he being the Inventor.

LINES [in Military Art] ſignify the Poſture of an Army drawn up for Battle; the Front being extended as far as the Ground will allow, to prevent its being flanked. Theſe Lines are 1. the Van; 2. the main Body; 3. the Rear.

LINE of the Anomaly of a Planet [in Aſtron.] according to the Ptolemaick Syſtem, is a right Line, drawn from the Centre of the Excentrick to the Centre of the Planet.

LINE of the Apſes [Aſtron.] is a right line paſſing from the Centre of the World, and that of the Excentrick; the two Ends of which, are the one the Apogee, and the other the Perigee of the Planet.

LINE of the Apogee of a Planet [Aſtron.] a line drawn from the Centre of the World, through the Point of the Apogee, as far as the Zodiack of the primum mobile.

Horizontal LINE [in Geography] a line parallel to the Horizon.

LINE of Longitude, of a Planet, either greateſt or leaſt [in Aſtron.] is that Part of the Line of the Apſes, which reaches from the Centre of the World, to either the Apogee or Perigee of the Planet.

LINE of mean Longitude [Aſtron.] is a line drawn thro' the Centre of the World, at right Angles to the line of the Apſes, and the extreme Points of it are termed the mean Longitudes.

LINE of mean Motion of the Sun [Aſtron.] is a right line drawn from the Centre of the World, as far as to the Zodiack of the primum mobile.

LINE of mean Motion of the Sun in the Excentrick [in Aſtron.] is a right line drawn from the Centre of the Excentrick to the Centre of the Sun, and parallel to the former.

LINE of real Motion of the Sun [Aſtron.] a line drawn from the Centre of the World to the Centre of the Sun, and protracted as far as the Zodiack of the primum mobile.

LINE of the Nodes of a Planet [Aſtron.] is a right line from the Planet to the Sun, being the common Place of interſection of the Plane of the Orbit of the Planet, with that of the Ecliptick.

Synodical LINE [Aſtron.] (in reſpect to ſome Phaſes of the Moon) is a right line, ſuppoſed to be drawn thro' the Centres of the Earth and Sun.

LINE of the mean Syſygies [Aſtron.] is a right line, imagined to paſs through the Centre of the Earth and the mean Place of the Sun.

LINE of the true Syſygies [Aſtron.] a right line, ſuppoſed to be drawn thro' the Centre of the Earth and the real Place of the Sun.

Equinoctial LINE [in Dialling] is the common Place, where the Equinoctial and the Plane of the Dial do mutually interſect one another.

Horary LINES [Diall.] are the common Interſections of the Hour, Circles of the Sphere, with the Dial Plane.

Horizontal LINE [Diall.] is a common Interſection of the Horizon, and the Dial Plane.

Subſtilar LINE [Diall.] is that line on which the Style of the Dial is erected, and repreſents ſuch an Hour Circle, as is perpendicular to the Plane of the Dial.

LINE [in Fortification] is what is drawn from one Point to another, in making a Plan on Paper. On the Ground in the Field, it is ſometimes taken for a Trench with a Parapet; at other Times, for a row of Bags of Earth or Gabions ſet in a line to cover the Men from the Fire of the Enemy.

LINE [in Fencing] is that directly oppoſite to the Adverſary, wherein the Shoulders, the right Arm and the Sword ſhould always be found, and wherein alſo the 2 Feet are to be placed, at a Foot and an half diſtance from each other; and in this Poſition he is ſaid to be in line.

LINES of approach } [Fortific.] are the Ways of Trenches,
LINES of attack } dug along the Earth, towards a Town that is beſieged, in order to gain the Moat and the Body of the Place.

LINE of the Baſe [in Fortific.] a right line, joining the Points of the two neareſt Baſtions.

Capital LINE [in Fortific.] a line drawn from the Angle at the Gorge to the Angle of the Baſtion.

LINE of Circumvallation [in Milit. Art] a Trench with a Parapet, made by the Beſiegers quite round their Camp, within Cannon Shot of the Place; to oppoſe any Army that may come to the relief of the Place, and to ſtop Deſerters.

Cogrital LINE [in Fortific.] one drawn from the Angle of the Centre to the Angle of the Baſtion.

LINES of Communication [in Fortific.] ſuch lines as run from one Work to another; but more eſpecially is a continued Trench, with which a Circumvallation or Contravallation is encompaſſed, ſo as to maintain a Communication with all its Forts, Redoubts, and other Works.

LINE of Contravallation [in Fortific.] a Trench with a breaſt Work or Parapet, which the Beſiegers make next to the Place beſieged, to ſecure themſelves againſt the Sallies of the Gariſon; ſo that an Army forming a Siege, lies between the lines of Circumvallation and Contravallation.

LINE of Defence [Fortific.] a ſtraight line ſhewing the Courſe of a Bullet, according to the Situation it ought to have to defend the Face of the Baſtion.

LINE of defence fichant [in Fortific.] a line drawn from the Angle of the Courtin to the flanked Angle of the oppoſite Baſtion, nevertheleſs without touching the Face of the Baſtion.

LINE of defence razant [in Fortific.] is a line drawn from the Point of the Baſtion along the Face, till it comes to the Courtin, and this ſhews how much of the Courtin will ſcour the Face.

LINE forming the Flank [Fortific.] one drawn from the Angle, made by the two Demi-gorges of the Baſtion to the Angle at the Flank.

LINES within ſide [in Fortific.] are Trenches or Moats, or Trenches cut towards the Place beſieged, to hinder Sallies.

LINES without ſide [in the Art of War] are Trenches towards the Field, to hinder any Succours from being brought to the beſieged.

LINE of the Front in Perſpective] is any right line parallel to a terreſtrial line.

Geometrical LINE, is a line drawn on a geometrical Plane after any manner.

Horizontal LINE [Perſpect.] is the common Section of the horizontal Plane, and that of the repreſentation or draught; which alſo paſſes thro' the principal Point.

LINE of Incidence [in Catoptricks] a Ray ſtarting from ſome luminous Body, and terminating in a Point of ſome Surface.

Objective LINE [in Perſpect.] the line of an Object, from whence the appearance is ſought for in the Draught or Picture.

Station LINE [Perſpect.] is the common Section of the vertical geometrical Plane; or the perpendicular Height of the Eye above the geometrical Plane; or a line drawn on that Plane, and perpendicular to the line expreſſing the Height of the Eye.

Terreſtrial LINE [in Perſpect.] a right line, in which the Geometrical Place and that of the Draught or Picture interſect each other.

Vertical LINE [in Perſpect.] is the common interſection of the vertical Plane and the Picture or Draught.

LINE of Direction [in Philoſophy] is that according to which a Body endeavours to move.

LINE of Gravitation of an heavy Body [Philo.] a line drawn through its Centre of Gravity, and according to which it tends downwards.

To LINE, to put a thing into the inſide of another.

To LINE [in Fortif.] is to ſurround and ſtrengthen a Work, with a Wall, Turf, &c.

To LINE Hedges [in Military Art] is to plant Musketeers along them under their Covert, to fire upon an Enemy that comes open, or to defend themſelves againſt the Horſe.

LINE of Meaſures [in Geometry] that Line in which the Diameter of any Circle to be projected does fall.

LINEA Alba [in Anatomy] a Concourſe of Tendons of the oblique Muſcles of the lower Belly, which meet on both Sides, and ſo form a kind of Coat that covers the Belly, as if they were all but one Tendon. L.

LINEA celerrmii deſcenſus [Mathemat.] that Curve which a Body would deſcribe in its deſcent, if it moved with the ſwifteſt Motion poſſible.

MA'GICK } gick Art.

MAGICK [μαγία, Gr.] is by ſome diſtinguiſhed into 4 kinds.

Natural MAGICK, natural Philoſophy, or the application of natural active Cauſes to paſſive Cauſes; by means of which many ſurprizing, but natural, Effects are produced: but the Arabians corrupting it, and filling it with many ſuperſtitious Vanities, the Name of it began to be underſtood in an ill Senſe.

Natural MAGICK [according to the Deſcription of ſome] is by Art and Induſtry to produce Vegetables before their natural Time, as ripe Roſes, Figs, &c. in February; alſo the cauſing Lightening, Thunder, Rain, Winds, Transfigurations and Tranſmutations of Animals, ſuch as Roger Bacon is ſaid to have performed by Natural Magick.

Divine MAGICK, which is performed by the immediate Grace of the Almighty, and depends on that Spirit and Power, which diſcovers it ſelf in noble Operations; ſuch as Prophecy, Miracles; ſuch Magicians were Moſes, Joſhua, the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Celeſtial MAGICK, attributes to Spirits a kind of Rule or Dominion over the Planets, and to the Planets, a Dominion over Men, and on this it raiſes a ridiculous kind of Syſtem, nearly bordering on judiciary Aſtrology.

White MAGICK, call'd alſo Theurgick, performed by the Aſſiſtance of an Angel, which, upon account of Religion, enjoins Faſting, Piety and Purity, that the Soul which is deſirous of Commerce with the ſuperiour Deities, may not be in any thing diverted by the Body, being ſinful or polluted.

MAGICK Geotetick, Magick performed by the Aſſiſtance of a Dæmon.

Superſtitious MAGICK, is performed by the Invocation of Devils; and the Effects of it are very Evil and Wicked, tho' very ſtrange and ſurpaſſing the Powers of Nature; and are ſaid to be performed by means of ſome compact, either expreſs or tacit, with Evil Spirits. But their Power is not near what is imagined, nor do they produce half the Effects commonly aſcribed to them.

Mathematical MAGICK, is that which, by mathematical Learning, and the Aſſiſtance of the celeſtial Influences, produces ſeemingly miraculous Works; as, walking and ſpeaking Images, as alſo by mechanical Science, and rare Art beyond the reach of vulgar Capacities. See Biſhop Wilkins, &c.

MAGICK Lanthorn, a ſmall Optick Machine, by means of which are repreſented on an oppoſite Wall in an obſcure Place, many monſtrous and hideous Shapes, terrifying to the beholder; and which, by thoſe who are ignorant of the Device, are thought to be effected by Magick.

But at this Time we find no Law written antienter than this Magna Charta, which was granted the 9th Year of Henry III. and confirmed by Edward I. This was approv'd of by the Subject, as ſo beneficial a Law, and of ſo great Equity, in compariſon to thoſe which were in Uſe before it, that King Henry had for granting it the 15th Peny of all the moveable Goods, of both the Temporality and Spirituality.

It is called the great Charter, either becauſe it contained more than many other Charters; or becauſe of the great and remarkable Solemnity in the denouncing Excommunication and direful Anathemas, againſt the Infringers of it. For when King Henry III. ſwore to the obſervation of this Charter, the Biſhops holding lighted Candles, extinguiſhed them, and then threw them on the Ground, and every one ſaid, thus let him be extinguiſhed and ſtink in Hell, who violates this Charter. Or elſe, becauſe it contained the ſum of all the Liberties of England; or elſe, becauſe there was another Charter, called Charta de Foreſta, eſtabliſhed with it, which was the leſs of the two.

MA'NOR } [of manoir, F. of manendo, L. becauſe the MA'NOUR } Lord did uſually reſide there] was a noble ſort of Fee antiently granted, partly to Tenants for certain Services, and partly reſerved for the Uſe of the Lord's Family, a Juriſdiction over his Tenants for their Farms..

The original of Manours was this: The King antiently granted a certain Compaſs of Ground to ſome Man of Merit, for him and his Heirs to dwell upon, and exerciſe ſome Juriſdiction, more or leſs, within that Circuit; for which the Lord performed ſuch Services, and paid ſuch annual Rents, as was required by the Grant. Now the Lord parcelling this Land out to other meaner Men, received Rent and Services of them; and ſo as he was Tenant to the King, they alſo were Tenants to him.

The whole Fee was call'd a Lordſhip, of old a Barony, from whence comes the term Court-Baron, which is always an Appendant to the Manour.

Manour at this Time, ſignifies rather the Juriſdiction or Royalty incorporeal, than the Land or Site; for a Man may have a Manour in Groſs, i. e. the Right and Intereſt of a Court-Baron, with the Perquiſites belonging to it, and another Perſon, or others, have every Foot of the Land.

MANOUR in Groſs, is the Right and Intereſt of a Court-Baron, with the Perquiſites belonging to it; which may be veſted in one Perſon, whilſt another or others have every Foot of the Land.

M'ANTLINGS [in Heral.] as now repreſented about Shields, are a ſort of Flouriſhings: However, they are always ſuppos'd in Blazon to be doubled; that is, lined throughout with ſome Part of the Furs. French Heralds ſay, that theſe Mantlings or Mantles were originally ſhort Coverings, that Commanders wore over their Helmets, to defend their Head from the Weather; and that coming away from Battle, they wore them hanging about them in a ragged manner, cauſed by the many Cuts that they had received on their Heads; and therefore the more hack'd they were, the more honourable they were accounted; and that in proceſs of Time they were by degrees made deeper, and ſo from the Helmet, to hang down below the whole Shield, and were adorned either according to the Honour of the Bearer, or Fancy of the Painter.

MARS [with Chymiſts] a Name given to Iron or Steel.

MARS [according to Varro, was ſo denominated of Mares, L. Males; becauſe he preſided over them in Battle; but others ſay, of Mavors, of magna, great Things, and verto, to turn; others from ἄρης of ἀναίρειν, Gr. killing; or as others will have it from אריה a Lion, or ארה he tore in ſunder; and others from Mamers in the Sabine Tongue] the God of War, as the Poets feign, was the Son of Juno, begotten without the Aſſiſtance of her Husband Jupiter; for Juno being diſpleaſed that her Husband Jupiter ſhould bring forth Minerva, by the ſtriking of his Head; ſhe alſo conſulted with the Goddeſs Flora, how ſhe might of her ſelf bring forth a Son; Flora bad her touch a Flower which grew in the Field Olenius, which ſhe having done, ſhe conceived and bare Mars, who being a Son of Diſcontent, was made a God of War and Diſcord. He was never grateful to Jupiter, and in his minority was nurſed by Thero, in the Northern Climates, that are inclinable to War. He lay with Venus the Wife of Vulcan, who, by his Craft, had made an Iron Net, and caſt it about them, as he found them naked; which Net was ſo artificially made, that neither of them could diſintangle themſelves; and then he called all the Gods to ſee them in that Poſture, which cauſed much Laughter among them; but at length, by the Entreaty of Neptune, he ſet them at Liberty.

He was repreſented riding in a high Chariot, drawn by 2 furious Horſes, by ſome named Terror, and Pavor or Fear, with all his Armour, offenſive and defenſive. His Attendants were 3 frightful Spirits, Apprehenſion, Contention and Clamour: Before him flew Fame full of Eyes, Ears and Tongues.

He was ſaid by ſome to have been Born in Thrace, becauſe the People of that Country offered human Sacrifices to him, and others offered to him, the Wolf, the Vulture, the Dog, the Pye, the Calf and the Horſe. Juſtin ſays, the Scythians had no other God; but Herodotus ſays, they worſhipped other Gods; but did allow no Temples or Statues, but only to Mars. The Romans had him in high Eſteem, becauſe they derived their Original from him, and gave out, that Romulus, was his Son,

They would not ſuffer his Statues and Images to be erected in their City; but without it, to intimate their Inclination to foreign, rather than civil War. His Prieſts were called Salii (of Saliendo) becauſe they danced and skipped about his Altars, which were erected under the ſame Root with thoſe of Venus, to expreſs the happy Influences that the Stars Mars and Venus beſtowed on Children, when they meet in their Nativities.

Mercury [ſo called, as ſome ſay, as tho' medicurius of medium the middle, and curius quaſi currens, i. e. running or ſtepping in between; becauſe Speech, of which this Deity is made the Preſident, runs to and again between two Perſons converſing together; others derive the Name of Mercury, q. mercium curam, as one taking care of merchandize, he being ſuppoſed to be the God of merchandizers] he was, as the Poets feign, the Son of Jupiter and Maia, the Daughter of Atlas, who bears the Heavens up with his Shoulders, and was born upon Mount Cyllene in Arcadia. His common Office was to be the common meſſenger and interpreter of the Gods, and therefore had Wings on his Head and Heels, and a Caduceus, which is a Rod with two Serpents twiſted round it, in his Hand, in Token of Peace, and Amity. Other of his Offices were to guard the Ways, and guide the deceas'd Souls into Hell; and therefore the Poets ſay, that none can die till Mercury comes to break the Tie that unites the Body and Soul together; and according to the Opinion of the Metempſychoſiſts, when when theſe Souls have paſſed many Years in the Elyſian Fields, and have drank of the River Lethe, he, by Virtue of his Rod, cauſes them to paſs into other Bodies to live again.

To him is attributed the Invention of the Lute, and a kind of Harp which he preſented to Apollo. He was accounted the God of Eloquence, and alſo of Thieves, having been a very dexterous Thief himſelf, as appears in his ſtealing his Sword from Mars, and a Pair of Tongs from Vulcan, Venus's Girdle from her, Neptune's Trident from him, and Apollo's Arrows and his Beaſts, when he fed Admetus's Cattle. He had alſo contriv'd to have ſtolen away Jupiter's Thunder-Bolts; but omitted to put it in Execution out of fear.

Mercury is ſaid to have had one Son by his Siſter, the Goddeſs Venus, who was named Hermaphrodite, who happening to meet with the Nymph Salmacis at a Fountain; the Gods, at her requeſt, made both their Bodies but one, in ſuch a manner, that both Sexes were conſerved intire. By this Fable the Poets would intimate the Union that ſhould be between married Perſons, who ought to be as one Body and one Heart.

He was much reverenced by the Egyptians, who worſhipped him in the Image of a Dog, called Anubis.

It is very probable that the famous Triſmegiſtus, who flouriſhed in the firſt Ages of the World, was worſhipped under the Name of Mercury. His Statue was uſually placed in Markets, and therefore he was call'd Ἀγοραῖος; he was painted with yellow Hair, and a Purſe in his Hand, to intimate the Advantage that is to be expected from Learning and Diligence. His Statues were alſo plac'd in High-ways, unto which they offered their firſt Fruits. His Image was ſometimes that of Hercules Gallicus, out of whoſe mouth came forth Chains of Gold, which were joined to the Ears of ſeveral little Men that ſtood at his Feet, to expreſs the Power of Eloquence that enſlaves the Auditors.

The Antients alſo painted him in a Coat of Flame-Colour, with a Mantle of pure White, trimmed with Gold and Silver, his Hair long, yellow and Curled, his Cap or Hat white, with white Wings on it, and on his Feet, holding in his Hand a Caduceus, or Rod of Silver, with two Serpents twining.

METAPHY'SICAL [μεταφυσικός, Gr.] of or pertaining to metaphyſicks.

METAPHY'SICKS [ars metaphyſica, of μεταφυσική, Gr. q. d. treating of Things above or beyond Nature] is a Science which conſiders Beings, as being abſtracted from all matter: in Beings it conſiders two Things, 1. The Eſſence of it, which ſeems to have a real Being, tho' it does not exiſt, as a Roſe in the depth of Winter. 2. The Exiſtence which is actully in Being, as the Exiſtence of a Roſe or Tulip, is that by which they now are. In every Being it conſiders three Properties; the Unity, the Goodneſs and Truth of it. And it alſo treats of Powers, Acts, Principles and Cauſes. And in Oppoſition to Ariſtotle, and others, proves that the World was not eternal; ſo that Metaphyſicks may be called natural Theology, and tranſcends all the other Parts of Philoſophy.

General METAPHYSICKS, gives an Account of Being, in its moſt abſtracted Nature; and under this Notion it may bear this Definition. Being is that which has in itſelf a real and poſitive Exiſtence.

METHOD [with Logicians] is the Art of diſpoſing a Series of Thoughts, either to find out a Truth that is unknown to our ſelves, or to convince others of a Truth that we know; and this method is call'd Analyſis and Syntheſis.

Analytical METHOD [with Mathematicians] or Algebra, is nothing but a general Analyſis of the pure Mathematicks; or it is ſo called, becauſe it ſhews how to ſolve Queſtions, and demonſtrate Theorems, by inquiring into the fundamental Nature and Frame of Things, which is as it were (for that Purpoſe) reſolv'd into its Parts, or taken all to Pieces, and then put together again.

Poriſtical METHOD [with Mathematicians] is a method that ſhews when, by what means, and how many different ways a Problem may be reſolved.

Synthetical METHOD of Enquiry or Demonſtration [with Mathematicians] is when the Enquirer purſues the Truth, chiefly by Reaſons drawn from Principles that have been before eſtabliſhed, and Propoſitions that have been before prov'd; and ſo proceeds by a long regular Chain, till at length he arrives at the Concluſion. This is the method that Euclid has follow'd in his Elements, and that moſt of the Antients have follow'd in their Demonſtrations, and is contradiſtinguiſh'd from the analytical method.

Zetetick METHOD [with Mathem.] is the analytick or algebraical method of reſolving Queſtions; by which the Nature and Reaſon of the Thing is chiefly ſought for and diſcovered.

MINE [minera, L. miniere, F.] a Place where Metals, &c. are dug. Mines of Metals are chiefly found under Mountains, and eſpecially in Places that face the Eaſt and South Sun.

That Ground which is rich in Mines, is generally barren, and ſends forth noxious Steams and Vapours, prejudicial to the Health of Mankind, and the growth of Vegetables.

It is not improbable, but the finding out of Metals in Mines, was owing to the Conflagration of Woods; and Ariſtotle relates, that ſome Shepherds in Spain, having ſet a Wood on Fire, found melted Silver run down in the ſame Place.

MINE [in Gunnery] a Hole or Pit dug by Pioneers under any Place or Work, having a Paſſage or Alley about five Foot ſquare, with ſeveral turnings and windings, at the End of which is the Place or Hole call'd the Chamber of the Mine, which is juſt under the Work deſigned to be blown up, which is filled with Barrels of Gunpowder, in order to blow it up.

Chamber of a MINE [in Milit. Affairs] is the ſmall Space at the End of the Gallery, like a ſmall Chamber, where the Barrels of Powder are depoſited, for blowing up what is propoſed to be ſprung.

Gallery of a MINE, is the firſt Paſſage made under Ground, being no higher nor broader than to ſuffer a Man to work upon his Knees, and which reaches to the Chamber.

MINE'RVA [ſo called of minando, threatning] the Poets tell us, that Jupiter having taken a Reſolution to bring forth the Goddeſs Minerva or Pallas, alone by himſelf, without the aſſiſtance of Juno, Minerva came out of his Brain in gallant Armour, holding a Lance in her Hand, and dancing a Dance called the Pyrrhick, which was a warlike Dance, invented by Pyrrhus, the Son of Achilles. And that Vulcan at this Time did the Office of a Midwife, cleaving Jupiter's Scull with a ſharp Hatchet, that Pallas might creep out. Being thus accoutred, ſhe was held to be the Goddeſs of War, and to be concerned in all Battles. They attribute to this Goddeſs the Invention of ſeveral Sciences and uſeful Inventions, as Spinning, Weaving, the Uſe of Oil, the Art of colouring Cloth, of Building, and the like, making her the Goddeſs of Wiſdom and all Arts. The Athenians paid her a ſingular Honour and Reſpect, and inſtituted ſeveral ſolemn Feſtivals in honour of this Goddeſs, which were celebrated with divers rare Spectacles and Expreſſions of Joy. She refuſed to be married to any of the Gods, and ſo led a Virgin Life. In one of thoſe Feſtivals, the Boys and Girls uſed to pray to the Goddeſs for Wiſdom and Learning, of which ſhe had the Patronage; and the Youths carried their Maſters their Fee or Preſent, which was call'd Minerval.

Minerva repreſents Wiſdom, that is skillful Knowledge join'd with direct Practice, comprehends the underſtanding of the nobleſt Arts, the beſt Accompliſhments of the mind, together with all Vertues; but more eſpecially that of Charity.

The Poets make five Minerva's: The 1ſt, Apollo's Mother; the 2d, the Daughter of Nile, which was worſhipped by the Egyptians, in the City of Sai; the 3d, that beforementioned; the 4th, the Daughter of Jupiter and Corypha; and the 5th, the Daughter of Pallantis, whom ſhe killed, he attempting to raviſh her.

Moral Impoſſibility. is what is otherwiſe call'd a very great and almoſt inſuperable difficulty, in oppoſition to a phyſical or natural Impoſſibility.

Moral Philoſophy, that which is otherwiſe called Ethicks, and is a Science that teaches the directing and forming our Manners; explains the Nature and Reaſon of Action; and ſhews how we may acquire that Happineſs that is agreeable to human Nature.

Moral Actions, are ſuch as render a rational or free Agent Good or Evil, and ſo of conſequence, rewardable or puniſhable, becauſe he doth them.

Mora'lity or Moral Philoſophy, is a conformity to thoſe unalterable Obligations which reſult from the Nature of our Exiſtence, and the neceſſary relation of Life, whether to God as our Creator, or to Man as our fellow Creature, or it is the Doctrine of Virtue, in order to attain the greateſt Happineſs, and hath theſe three Parts, Ethicks, Oeconomicks and Politicks.

Socrates is ſaid to have been the firſt Philoſopher, who ſet himſelf about the reforming of Manners; for till his Time, the whole Buſineſs of the Philoſophers, was the Study of the heavenly Bodies; tho' Pythagoras ſhew'd Socrates the Way, yet the Specimen that he gave was very imperfect; he deducing his Rules of Morality, from the Obſervations of Nature, which Part of Knowledge he acquired by converſing with the Egyptian Prieſts.

The main Aim of Pythagoras's moral Doctrine, was to purge the Mind from the Impurities of the Body, and from the Clouds of the Imagination. His morality ſeems to have had more Purity and Piety in it, than the other Syſtems, but leſs exactneſs; his maxims being only a bare Explication of divine Worſhip, of natural Honeſty, of Modeſty, Integrity, publick Spiritedneſs, and other common Offices of Life.

The golden Verſes which go under the Name of Pythagoras, were attributed to his Diſciples, who were as remarkable for the Practice, as the Theory of Ethicks. So that in the Time of the firſt Conſuls of Rome, his Sect was in that Repute, that to be a wiſe Man and a Pythagorean, were accounted Terms equivalent.

To this morality of Pythagoras, Socrates added ſettled Principles, and reduc'd it into method; his main Deſign was to reform and purge the Philoſophy of Pythagoras. His whole Doctrine was one continued Leſſon of Virtue. He eſtabliſhed it as a Rule of Diſcourſe, to treat of the moſt ſerious Subjects, without an Air of too much ſeriouſneſs, knowing that to pleaſe, was the ſureſt method to perſuade; and therefore his morals gain'd admittance, by a ſeeming eaſineſs and agreeableneſs.

That

That Doctrine of morality that was left him by his Master Socrates, was improv'd by Plato, who carried each Virtue to its last Height and Accomplishment, by mixing his Idea's on the universal Principle of Philosophy thro' the whole Design. His Philosophy abounds with good Lessons, which tend either to the encouragement of Virtue, or discountenancing Vice. Diogenes was contemporary with Plato, and commenc'd a severe Pique against him, designing to expose the easiness and gentility of Plato, by an affectation of Rigour. The Foundation of his morals, were a vain haughtiness and moroseness of Temper. Plato first rectified the Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul, which Pere Rapin says, Socrates learn'd from Pythagoras, Pythagoras from the Ægyptians, and the Ægyptians from the Hebrews, by the Travels and Converse of Abraham.

Aristotle form'd the Doctrine of Plato, his Master, into a more regular Body, by distinguishing the Characters of publick and private Virtue, &c.

But after all, this morality of Aristotle's, as well as that of Socrates and Plato, is only capable of making a Philosopher; but has not Strength enough to make an honest Man, without the sublime Philosophy of Christianity; tho' this morality had a fine Notion, sufficient to teach a Man to know his Duty; yet it was not sufficient to engage him to love and embrace it.

The morals of Zeno and Epicurus having made a great Noise in the World, Ethicks from that Time began to be cultivated more than any other Part of Philosophy, and the summum bonum was the main Subject that was handled about, according to the various Opinions, and sometimes according to the Complexions and Constitutions of Philosophers: Some placing it in one Thing, and some in another, till they had multiply'd to that Degree, that Varro reckons up 288 different Opinions. After Zeno and Epicurus, we find no new Draught or Scheme of morality. Indeed there are Theophrastus's Characters, which are very good Lessons of Manners; and Tully's Offices, which are founded upon the severest Virtue; and Seneca's Morals, which are less pure and exact; and Pliny gives us some bright and forcible Strokes of morality; but Epictetus is the most rational of the Stoicks; but the Christian Revelation has opened a way for such refin'd Ethicks, that it makes all the Heathen morality appear to be dark aud trivial.

The brightness of the Christian Morality amazed the Pagans themselves; and the Lives of the Primitive Christians were so severely sober, that they were constant Lessons of Morality to the Heathens; which put them upon reducing their Morals to a purer Standard: So that at last it became so severe, as to vie with that of the Christians; and most of the Philosophers, in the Time of Antoninus, joined themselves to the Stoicks. But, as a certain Author says, all the Heathens or Stoick Morality appeared to be so weak, that they soon fell into the Contempt of all such as seriously gave themselves to the study of Virtue and a good Life. For as to what Zeno taught concerning the Indifference to Pleasure and Pain, Glory and Infamy, Wealth and Poverty, this was never really found, but under the Discipline of Faith, And besides the Contentment and Felicity under Sufferings, which was so much boasted of by the Heathen Sages, it was never made good but by Christian Examples: And that the sum of the philosophical Virtue of the Heathens, upon a strict inquiry, seemed to be nothing but an Art to conceal Mens Vices, and to flatter their Pride; because the utmost that could perform, was only to fill the Mind with false Ideas of Constancy and Resolution: But the Christians brought them into an Acquaintance with their real Infirmities, and instructed them how to restrain their irregular Desires. which they were allow'd to enjoy by their former Institutions. The new Evangelical Morals were established by the Doctrine of these new Lights; as St. Basil, St. Chrysostom, St. Jerom, St. Ambrose, St. Austin, &c. have been the most eminent antient Expositors of this divine morality.

MOTHER Tongues, are such Languages as seem to have no dependance upon, derivation from, or affinity with one another. Some have been of Opinion, that at the Confusion of Languages at the Building of Babel, there were formed 70 or 72 Languages. But Bishop Wilkins and others are of Opinion that there were not so many, nor that Men did then disperse into so many Colonies.

There have been, and at this Time there are in the World a far greater Number. Pliny and Strabo relate that in Dioscuria, a Town of Colchos, there were Men of 300 Nations, and so many distinct Languages, did resort on account of Traffick.

Some Historians relate, that in every 80 Miles of that vast Continent, and almost in every particular Valley of Peru, a distinct Language or mother Tongue to them was spoken.

And Purchase speaks of a 1000 distinct Languages spoken by the Inhabitants of North America, about Florida.

Julius Scaliger asserts, that there are no more than eleven mother Tongues used in Europe, of which four are of more general Use and large Extent, and the other seven of a narrower Extent and Use. Those of the larger Extent are

1. The Greek, which in antient Times was used in Europe, Asia and Africa, which also did by dispersion and mixture with other People, degenerate into several Dialects. As, the Attick, Dorick, Æolick, Ionick.

2. The Latin, which, tho' it is much of it derived from the Greek, had antiently four Dialects, as Petrus Crinitus shews out of Varro. From the Latin are derived the Italian, Spanish and French.

3. The Teutonick or German, which is now distinguished into upper and lower.

The upper Teutonick has two notable Dialects. 1. The Danish, Scandian, or it may be the Gothick; to which the Language used in Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Island do appertain. 2. The Saxon, from which much of the English and Scotch are derived, and also the Frizian Language, and those Languages on the North of the Elve.

4. The Sclavonick, which extends itself thro' many large Territories, tho' not without some variation, as Bohemia, Croatia, Dalmatia, Lithuania, Muscovia, Poland and Vandalia, this is said to be a Language used by 60 several Nations.

The Languages of lesser Extent are.

1. The Albanese or old Epirotick, now in use in the mountaineous Parts of Epirus.

2. The European, Tartar or Scythian, from which some suppose the Irish took its Original.

3. As for the Turkish Tongue, that originally is no other but the Asiatick, Tartarian Tongue, mixed with Armenian, Persian, much Arabick, and some Greek.

4. The Hungarian, used in the greatest part of that Kingdom.

4. The Finnick, used in Finland and Lapland.

6. The Cantabrian, in use with the Biscainers, who live near the Ocean on the Pyrenean Hills, which border both on Spain and France.

7. The Irish, from thence brought over into some Parts of Scotland, which, Mr. Camden supposes to be derived from the Welsh.

8. The old Gaulish or British, still preserved in Wales, Cornwal and Britain in France.

To these Mr. Brerewood adds 4 more.

1. The Arabick that is now used in the steep Mountains of Granada, which however is no Mother Tongue, being a Dialect of the Hebrew.

2. The Cauchian, used in East Friezland.

3. The Illyrian, in the Island Veggia.

4. The Jazygian, on the North-side of Hungary.

Proper MOTION, is a removal out of one proper Place into another, as the motion of a Wheel in a Clock.

Improper MOTION, is the Passage of a Body out of one common Place into another common Place, as that of a Clock when moved in a Ship.

Absolute MOTION [with Philosophers] is the changing of the absolute Place of any Body that moves; so that the swiftness of its motion will be measured by the quantity of the absolute Space, which the moving Body has run through.

Simple MOTION, one that is produced from some one Power.

Compound MOTION, is one produced by several conspiring Powers.

Relative MOTION [with Philosophers] is a change of the relative Place of a Body that moves, the swiftness of which is estimated or measured by the Quantity of relative Space, which the Thing moving runs over.

The MOTION of the Spirit, is called agitation, whereby the Spirit agitates itself in the Matter, seeking to inform it.

The MOTION of the Light, is that whereby the Light and the Heat diffuse themselves into all the Parts.

The MOTION of Matter, is eightfold of Expansion, Contrectation, Aggregation, Sympathy, Continuity, Impulsion, Libration and Liberty.

The

The MOTION of Expanſion, is that whereby the Matter being rarified with Heat, dilates it ſelf of its own accord, ſeeking larger room.

The MOTION of Contraction, is that whereby the Matter is contracted, betaking itſelf into a narrower Space by Condenſation.

The MOTION of Aggregation, is when a Body is carried to its Connaturals.

The MOTION of Sympathy, is that whereby a like Body is drawn to its like.

The MOTION of Antipathy, is that where an unlike Body is driven away by its contrary.

The MOTION of Continuity, is that whereby matter follows matter, ſhunning diſcontinuity.

The MOTION of Impulſion or Ceſſion, is that whereby matter yields to matter that preſſeth upon it.

The MOTION of Libration, is that wherein the Parts wave themſelves to and fro, that they may be rightly placed in the whole.

The MOTION of Liberty, is that whereby a Body, a Part thereof being violently moved out of its Place and yet not plucked away, returns thither again.

MOTION of a Bomb or Cannon Ball, is the Progreſs it makes in the Air after it is delivered, and is of three ſorts; as Violent MOTION of a Ball, is the firſt Expulſion of it, when the Powder has worked its Effect upon the Ball; or ſo far as the Ball or Bomb may be ſuppoſed to go in a right Line.

Mixt MOTION of a Ball, is when the Weight of the Bomb or Ball begins to overcome the Force that was given by the Powder.

Natural MOTION of a Ball, is when the Bomb or Ball is falling.

Natural MOTION, is ſuch a motion as has its principle or moving Force within the moving Body, as that of a Stone falling towards the Earth.

Violent MOTION, is a motion, the principle of which is without, and againſt which the moving Body makes a reſiſtance, as the motion of a Stone thrown upwards.

Pretty MOTION [with Horſemen] a Term uſed to ſignify the freedom of the motion of the Fore-Legs, when a Horſe bends them much upon the manage; alſo when a Horſe trots right out, and keeps his Body ſtrait, and his Head high, and bends his Fore-Legs handſomly.

MOTION equally accelerated [in Mechanicks] is ſuch whoſe velocity increaſes equally in equal times.

MOTION equally retarded, is ſuch, the velocity of which equally increaſes in equal times, till the Body comes to reſt.

MOTION of the Apogee [in Aſtronomy] is an Arch of the Zodiack of the primum mobile.

The Laws of MOTION [according to Sir Iſ. Newton] are,

1. That every Body will continue its State, either of Reſt or Motion, uniformly forward in a right Line, unleſs it be made to change that State by ſome force impreſſed upon it.

2. That the change of motion is in proportion to the moving force expreſſed; and is always according to the direction of that right Line in which the force is impreſs'd.

3. That Reaction is always equal and contrary to Action; or, which is the ſame Thing, the mutual Actions of two Bodies one upon another are equal, and directed towards contrary Parts; as when one Body preſſes and draws another, 'tis as much preſſed and drawn by that Body.

MOTIONS of an Army, are the ſeveral Marches and counter Marches which it makes in changing its Poſts.

Musician [musicus, L. of μουσικὸς, Gr. musicien, F.] a Professor of, a Practitioner in Musick.

Mu'sick [musica, L. of μουσικὴ, Gr.] is one of the seven liberal Sciences, pertaining to the Mathematicks, which considers the Number, Time and Tune of Sounds, in order to make delightful Harmony; and is either Practical or Theorical.

Practical Musick, shews the method of composing all sorts of Tunes or Airs, together with the Art of singing and playing on all sorts of musical Instruments.

Theorical Musick, is that which inquires and searches into the Nature and Properties of Concords and Discords, and explains the Proportions between them by Numbers.

Enharmonick Musick, is a sort of musick that abounds in Diæsis, or Sharps.

Chromatick Musick, is a delightful and pleasant sort of musick; but this, by Reason of its wanton measures, was rejected.

Elementary Musick, the Harmony of the Elements of Things.

Celestial Musick, the Musick of the Spheres, comprehends the Order and Proportion in the Magnitudes, Distances and Motions of the heavenly Bodies, and the Harmony of the Sounds resulting from those Motions.

Human Musick, is that which consists chiefly in the Faculties of the human Soul and its various Passions.

Diatonick Musick, a Musick proceeding by different Tones, either in ascending or descending: This the Antients admitted.

Moods of Musick, are denominated, according to divers Countries, for whose particular Genius they seemed at first to have been contrived; and these are three; the Lydian, the Phrygian, and the Dorick.

Musick [of the Lydian Mood] was shrill.

Musick [of the Phrygian Mood] was martial, and excited Men to Fury and Battel; by this mood Timotheus stirred up Alexander to Arms.

Musick [of the Dorick Mood] was grave and modest, and therefore called religious musick. To these three Sappho, the Lesbian added a fourth, called the Mixolydian Mood, which was only fit for Tragedies, and to move Compassion.

There have also been three other moods added to them, equal to the Number of the Planets; the Hypolygian, Hypophrygian and Hypodorian, and these were called Collateral ones. And there was also an eighth added by Ptolomy, called the Hypermixolydian, which is the sharpest and shrillest of all.

The Exercise of musick is salutary, in that it expels melancholy; vocal musick opens the Breast and Pipes, and is good to remedy stammering in Speech. Antient Historians, as Ælian, Pliny and Plutarch relate, that the antient musicians have moved the Passions of Mens Minds at their Pleasure, appeased the Disconsolate and Desperate, tempered the Amorous, and healed even the Sick, and wrought wonderful Effects.
